Sample of Power

They're going to strike up the band here today, and behind the ringing music along Constitution Avenue American soldiers, sailors, marines and coast guardsmen, trained to a finish, will march with their newest shooting irons to show how America is feeling this Memorial Day.

A mile and a half away, on the Arlington Cemetery hillside, the white marble tomb of the Unknown Soldier will be banked with flowers by the time the Capital's first big-scale war parade disbands at Constitution Avenue and Seventeenth Street.

While Washington is getting an eyefull of the Army, hundreds of thousands of workmen throughout the country will forego the usual Memorial Day holiday to stand by the machines pouring out planes, guns and ships for the fighting sons of fighting men, the War Department reported. Their work, they were told by Donald Nelson, war production chief, will be the finest tribute of all to the Nation's dead.

Parade Begins at 4

The Army intends hauling out generous samples of almost every hard-hitting weapon it owns. It will start the parade at 4 p. m. at New Jersey Avenue and B Street Southeast and move north across the Capitol grounds, then west on Constitution Avenue and past the reviewing stand at Sixteenth Street and Constitution and thence to Seventeenth Street.

The parade is expected to pass between densely packed sidewalks the entire route. The crowd will probably be mostly local, because of the difficulties of travel. War Department employes will be ex-

Seaman Leads 'Life o' Reilly' Adrift on Raft

By James T. Carter
Associated Press Staff Writer

New York, May 29.—They thought there was something a wee bit fishy about Harley Archie Olson's story when he was rescued—bronzed, sleek and healthy—after 29 days alone at sea on a raft.

So, when the rescue vessel arrived at Key West with the 23-year-old radio operator whose ship was torpedoed April 19, the FBI detained him while checking his tale.

But they found that his story—one of the most amazing to come out of the Battle of the Atlantic—was true, and Harley, stopping in New York on the way home to Portland, Oreg., told about it today:

"I didn't lose any weight, I was never afraid of sharks, I had plenty to eat and drink. I enjoyed sun bathing by day and slept comfortably at night," said the 6-foot-2-inch "Sparks."

"I had more trouble explaining why I wasn't half-starved or half-mad from thirst or something than I did while waiting on the raft to be picked up.

"They thought I was a 'plant.' They thought I was placed on the raft by a German submarine. I was held in Miami until my fingerprints were checked in Washington and until they learned that I was an American citizen employed by a steamship line."

After the torpedoing, Harley leaped overboard, sighted a liferaft and clambered on it. Soon he spied another, then some wreckage, then part of another raft. Pooling the best of his findings, he chose the most seaworthy raft and loaded it with food, water, canvas for covering and sails and an old settee.

By day he lounged on the settee, fishing with a net made from bandages in a first aid kit, or just drowsing. By night he covered himself with canvas and curled up on the settee.

"Gentle waves rocked me to sleep," he said. "I guess I was pretty lucky, all right."

TWO WARS ARE SYMBOLIZED in this view of the Unknown Soldier's Tomb in Arlington National Cemetery against a background of the rising new War Department Building—a building to house 30,000 workers

Echoes of Conflict

A New War Disturbs Sleep Of Soldier 'Known But to God'

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Staff Writer

FROM THE HILL in Arlington where the Unknown Soldier sleeps, the war effort of 1942 is plainly visible on this Memorial Day.

A rifle shot from the Tomb, over toward the east, workmen toil furiously on the new War Department Building, that stupendous 20-million-dollar structure that is to house 30,000. Barracks and tents can be seen in that direction, too, and new and half-finished roads that have transformed the Virginia landscape since Memorial Day, 1941.

The pilgrim to Arlington learns with something of a shock that not even the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier is considered immune from enemy air attack. After Pearl Harbor, steps were taken to protect the nameless warrior's collection of decorations and medals, some 59 in number. All were brought together on the first floor of the trophy room of the Arlington Amphitheater. Some of them had been on the second floor, but it was felt they would be safer below if bombs began to fall.

There are other reminders of war amid the serenity of Arlington National Cemetery. The number of visitors to the Unknown Soldier's Tomb has fallen off sharply, due, of course, to the gasoline and tire situation.

PRETTY SOON, the guards say, the buses and their loads of tourists may stop coming altogether, and the prospect is one that they don't exactly like. They will miss particularly one regular of long standing, a veteran sightseeing barker.

This old fellow, the guards say, approaches the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier as he might approach an altar in a cathedral, and he requires that his flock of tourists show the same deep reverence. He asks them to uncover and observe a moment of silence. He himself bows his head, makes the Sign of the Cross, and murmurs a little prayer. Then, resuming his professional role, he goes into his history of the Tomb.

No matter what happens in the days ahead to thin out the visitors to Arlington, the American soldier "known but to God" will never be alone. An Army sentry, bayonet fixed, paces back and forth before the Tomb day and night, fair weather or foul. Thus it will always be for the Nation's most revered fighting man, whose Tomb is Army Post No. 1.

On this day, the white marble sarcophagus will be banked high with flowers—roses, gladioli, and other blossoms of spring. They will come from the President of the United States, from America's allies in the War of the World, and from scores of patriotic societies.

FLOWERS, and the sentiment they carry in their fragrance, are about all the world can offer to the Unknown Soldier now. In the 21 years since a spray of white roses was dropped on his casket in Chalons-sur-Marne, and the U.S.S. Olympia brought him home to "rest in honored glory," there have been awarded to him all the decorations a hero could possibly earn, including some from a country that now is America's foe: Italy.

The MacArthurs, the O'Hares, the Bulkeleys and the Doolittles have some of them, but this valiant Yank of 1917-1918 has them all—Britain's precious Victoria Cross as well as his own country's Congressional Medal of Honor; France's Medaille Militaire, Order de Legion d'Honneur, and Croix de Guerre; Belgium's Croix de Guerre, torn from his tunic by Lieut. Gen. Baron Jacque and placed on the Unknown's casket on the day of the funeral in 1921; Italy's Gold Medal for Bravery; Rumania's Virtutea Militara; Poland's Virtuti Militari; Czecho-Slovakia's War Cross, and a roomful of other trophies, including a winged angel presented by the Republic of China.

As the inscription on one if his medals says:

And so sepulchred in such pomp dost lie,
That kings for such a tomb would wish to die.

THE UNKNOWN SOLDIER, if he were an average doughboy of the World War, would be about 48 now. If alive he probably would be a substantial citizen, wrapped up in the work of civilian defense at home.

What would he think of the situation in general as the Nation heads into its sixth month of war? Talk to the veterans who fought in the same war, and you might get some idea.

He probably would be surprised that Americans still talk about "non-interventionists" and "interventionists;" he would assume that Pearl Harbor ought to have ended that debate. He would take it for granted that the United Nations will win the war, not because he would hold the Axis powers too cheaply, but simply because he would know that our own side is better. He probably would wonder about well-meaning orators who have been saying, "Remember, we can lose this war."

He wouldn't be surprised that Ford, General Motors and the others have surpassed the President's "fantastic" goals. Neither would he be surprised that the Army and the Navy are beginning to shine.

Not having been affected by the cynicism of the 20's and 30's—when his kind were being sneered at as flag-wavers and patrioteers—he would never have lost confidence in his country. He would remind you, without being stuffy about it, that America after all has been a success.

Madeline Webb Guilty, Gets Life

New York, May 29.—Madeline Webb was convicted of first degree murder today by a jury which recommended mercy.

The verdict meant life imprisonment for the pretty 28-year-old model from Stillwater, Okla., for her part in the strangulation of Mrs. Susan Flora Reich, wealthy Polish refugee, last March 4.

Former U. S. Employe Tells House Group Of 'Supersalesmanship'

By Alex H. Singleton
Associated Press Staff Writer

A former $4600-a-year Government employe, who turned supersalesman late in 1940, testified yesterday that he had earned approximately $600,000 "gross commissions" in 15 months time by obtaining 12 million dollars in naval contracts for several manufacturing companies.

Alexander Stone of Washington acknowledged before the House Naval Investigating Committee that he had agreements with several companies, now doing war work, giving him 5 per cent of the amount of contracts which he procured for them.

He said that he actually had received thus far only about $65,000, adding that his collections were based upon deliveries of the war material and that some of the Navy contracts were subject to cancellation.

Dapper, dark-haired and soft-spoken, Stone firmly insisted that his contracts with the companies were legal and maintained he had done a service in determining the Navy's needs and in finding manufacturers' able to meet them.

But, he twisted in his seat and cried out, "I resent that," when Chairman Vinson (Democrat), of Georgia, turned to Roger Wolcott

Tax Plans Due to Be Scaled Down

Committee Views Shift Toward Lower Profit Levy, Keeping Present Exemptions

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

Two and possibly more of the major tax decisions of the House Ways and Means Committee, vitally affecting both corporations and individuals, may be reconsidered within the next month, it was indicated last night.

As the committee ordered a recess over the weekend, the big pending tax bill was described by one member as "in a state of flux," with final action on a completed measure not probable before July 1.

Points apparently due for reconsideration, on the basis of a strong trend of sentiment within the committee, were:

The proposed 94 per cent excess profits tax, levied in addition to a 40 per cent normal tax on corporations. The committee is expected either to lower this rate, or vote corporations a post-war refund of at least 10 per cent of it.

Proposed lowering of exemptions to $500 for single persons and $1200 for married, with a 6 per cent normal tax and a 12 to 81 per cent range of surtaxes levied on all income above those amounts. A growing segment of the committee favors continuance of the present $750 and $1500 exemptions, particularly if the committee decides on a sales tax or withholding tax.

Mail Causes Shift

Members have increasingly emphasized the "tentative" nature of all tax action taken to date, and uncertainty on the final provisions of the bill was never more apparent than over this weekend. Partly responsible for the reconsideration trend was congressional mail, now pouring in with first reactions of business and individual constituents.

A showdown meanwhile was shaping up on the sales tax which may carry the issue to the White House before the committee finally reports a bill.

Slated to bring this controversial question to a head is the Treasury's recommendation for $1,340,000,000 in excise taxes, set for committee discussion Monday.

Far Short of Goal

With the committee nearly two billion dollars short of the Treasury's overall $8,900,000,000 revenue goal, and few sources remaining to tap, the Treasury may be told that the balance can be raised only by a sales tax. If the Treasury insists on the full amount, the Administra-

CHAPTER XXVII

Chicago, Ill., May 29.—The story of eggs is a fine example of what they do here at the Chicago Quartermaster Depot to give badly needed ships more carrying capacity. Eggs are difficult to handle in transit; they are bulky and heavy and fragile and must be refrigerated to prevent spoilage and a great part of them is waste when they finally reach the company cook's tent behind the front.

A case of eggs weighs 55 pounds, of which an appreciable proportion is shells, fillers, case and moisture. The same case of eggs dried weighs only 10 pounds and is packed in a tin container weighing only a few ounces.

ANDREWS

The case of whole eggs takes up 3744 cubic inches of shipping space. Dried, the case of eggs requires only 640 cubic inches of space, so you can pack six cases of dried eggs into the space needed for one case of whole eggs and not bother about packing them so none will be broken. What's more, the dried eggs can be shipped in the vessel's cargo hold, whereas the whole eggs would require refrigeration with the additional weight and bulk of insulation and ice.

In the cook's hands dried eggs can be treated exactly as whole eggs, except that they can't be served sunny side up, boiled or poached. And he has no question of garbage disposal to worry about; his soldiers can eat everything but the can.

With fruits it's the same way. They have an orange concentrate of which 3 ounces will make a quart of real orange juice packed with vitamin C. Twelve ounces of lemon powder will make 6 gallons of lemonade. They've developed cereals with milk and sugar solids already added which require only a little water to bring them up to breakfast size. The same with cocoa; and powdered coffee concentrate is an old story with the Army.

Along with its dehydrated and other specially prepared food, the Chicago Quartermaster Depot buys and ships fresh meat to the Army in the United States. This was a tough job when the

Nazis Held in Ukraine; U. S. Troops to Invade France, Marshall Says

Chief of Staff Says Army Will Have 4,500,000 Troops By End of Year

Special Dispatch to The Post

West Point, N. Y., May 29.—Gen. George C. Marshall, Army Chief of Staff, promised today that American troops would invade Europe and said that by the end of the year the United States would have an army of nearly 4,500,000 men.

Speaking before the graduating class of 374 West Point cadets, Marshall disclosed plans for greatly stepping up expansion of the Army this year and then carrying the fight to the Axis

American soldiers, he stated, are landing in England "and they will land in France"

"Overwhelming Power"

"We are determined," he added, "that before the sun sets on this terrible struggle, our flag will be recognized throughout the world as a symbol of freedom on the one hand and of overwhelming power on the other."

The chief of staff revealed that induction of men into the Army had been greatly speeded up, with 300,000 soldiers added within the past four weeks.

The goal of nearly 4,500,000 men by the first of next year is considerably higher than had been known. Earlier this year, Secretary Stimson announced that 32 new divisions would be created during 1942 and that 3,600,000 men would be in uniform by the end of the year.

More Combat Divisions Likely

While a large part of the new men will go into the Air Force, it is likely that additional combat divisions will be formed this fall. The old goal was a force of 59 infantry or motorized divisions, 10 armored and 2 cavalry divisions.

The 4,500,000-man Army will be some 500,000 greater than the peak reached in the last war and compares with but 1,953,000 in May, 1918, 13 months after America entered that conflict.

General Marshall told the West Point graduates that they were joining "a great citizen-Army . . . in physique, in natural ability and in intelligence, the finest personnel in the world."

"In their eagerness to work, to endure and to carry through any missions, they are all that could be desired of soldiers," he continued. "They but require the modern tools of their profession, the support of the people back home, and above all, understanding leadership."

Marshall declared that the Army's pilots "represent the flower of American manhood" and its planes "the perfection of American mechanical ingenuity."

"No finer body of men can be found," he stated. "They are con-

'Protector' Dead?

12 More Die For Attack On Heydrich

By the Associated Press

London, May 29.—German firing squads executed 12 more Czechs today after a speedy court-martial, bringing to 18 the number of persons put to death for the attempted assassination of Reinhard Heydrich, the Gestapo leader. Rumors were current in Europe that Heydrich had died, but these still were unconfirmed late tonight.

A Stefani dispatch from Prague shortly before midnight said that Heydrich, known throughout Europe as "Der Henker" (the Hangman), remained in critical condition with bullets in his spine.

Of the 12 persons executed today, four were women. All were charged with harboring unregistered persons engaged in activities hostile to Germany. Six lived in Brunn and another man and woman lived in a suburb of that city.

Six others were executed yesterday as Heydrich's Gestapo agents began rounding up hostages. The Moscow radio reported that 200,

U. S. Freighter Sunk in Gulf, Six Lives Lost

Torpedoed Without Warning at Midnight; 29 Survivors Landed

By the Associated Press

New Orleans, May 29.—Sinking of a large American cargo ship without warning at midnight May 18 in the Gulf of Mexico with the loss of six lives, including three ship's officers, was announced by the Eighth Naval District here today.

Twenty-nine survivors were rescued and landed at a gulf port May 22.

The ship previously escaped from a submarine shelling March 20 in the Atlantic.

Those missing and believed lost were Capt. Willard Davis, jr., Narberth, Pa.; First Mate John Bihan of Chester, Pa.; Second Mate John D. Holmes of Port Arthur, Texas; and Seamen Alexander Decuir of Beaumont, Texas; John E. Mitchell of Tiline, Ky., and Edward W. Burton of Houston, Texas.

Nazi Gives Victims Rum

Groton, Conn., May 29 (AP).—The master of a torpedoed American freighter told today how the captain of a German U-boat sent his craft to the bottom on May 21, then tarried long enough on the spot to proffer cigarettes and rum.

Capt. George Hazeleaf of Oakland, Calif., and 29 members of his crew, who drifted for five days in open boats, often drenched by heavy rains, were brought to the U. S. submarine base here after rescue by a Navy ship.

The submarine captain, having put the survivors on the course to New York, voiced regret in good English:

"Sorry, but this is war."

Only one man was lost—Second Mate Fred C. Martin of San Antonio, Tex., who died on the bridge as the second of three torpedoes (the first

Three Drums Let Go

Youth Detained as Boy, 5, Dies in Gasoline Explosion

A 20-year-old youth was being held last night in connection with the death of James Kitsoulis, 5, who was killed yesterday when three drums of gasoline exploded in a Quebec Place garage. The blast also brought injuries to the child's aunt, Mrs. Helen A. Kitsoulis.

The youth, Spiros Zis, 1364 Girard Street Northwest, was held at Tenth Precinct station on a charge of violating the police regulation against storing gasoline without a permit. He was freed later on $300 bond. Meantime, both the homicide squad and the District coroner's office were investigating circumstances of the explosion.

Police said Zis told them that the blast occurred in a garage at 638 Quebec Place Northwest while he was pouring the gasoline from one of the drums into the tank of a car belonging to his cousin, Angelo Jones, 2320 Fourteenth Street Northwest.

Prior to that, he told police, he had on several occasions chased out James and two other children who were running in and out of the garage.

When the explosion occurred, Zis said, he immediately ran out to call firemen, unaware that James was in the car. He was taken into custody at the offices of the American Automobile Association, Seventeenth Street and Pennsylvania Avenue Northwest.

Police said that A. A. A. officials told them he had gone there with Jones to make out an affidavit to

Battle of Attrition

By the Associated Press

Moscow (Saturday), May 30. The Ukraine battle of attrition rolled on early today with the Soviets announcing the repulse of steady Nazi tank and infantry charges in the Izyum-Barvenkova sector while American-equipped Red airmen shot down 113 German planes in two days.

The midnight communique also said that Red naval forces in the Barents Sea sank a 12,000-ton German transport and an 800-ton trawler.

Sixty German planes were bagged Wednesday and 53 more Thursday, but the ground conflict on the Russian plains had produced "no substantial changes," the communique said.

Reds Attack Near Kalinin

Russia's peasant army still was punching the German positions from Leningrad to the Black Sea. In the Kalinin area northwest of Moscow the communique said that Red troops occupied several more populated places after killing 700 Germans.

(The B. B. C. quoted the Moscow radio as saying the German attacks on the Kharkov flank at Izyum-Barvenkova "are weakening" in the effort to force the Donets River bend north of Izyum, roughly 70 miles south of Kharkov.

("Although all is comparatively quiet on the front east of Kharkov, Moscow radio says that Marshal Timoshenko's troops, when they are not stabilizing their positions, are still snatching villages from the Germans," the B. B. C. said as heard by C. B. S.).

Hundreds of German dead were reported lying along the crater-marked front.

Seeking to break the Russian drive against Kharkov, one of Russia's principal industrial cities before it became the target of two contending armies, the Germans were said officially to be throwing quantities of tanks and infantry against the Russian lines in the Izyum-Barvenkova sector 60 miles south of Kharkov.

The Russians said their soldiers were putting up "fierce battles" against the onslaughts, but the official communique left the trend in doubt.

The Russians also were silent on

Battle in Rain

Chinese Cling To Kinhwa And Lanchi

By Spencer Moosa
Associated Press Staff Writer

Chungking, China, Saturday, May 30.—Chinese soldiers desperately resisting repeated Japanese onslaughts are holding grimly to the important Chekiang Province cities of Kinhwa and Lanchi, Central News dispatches from the front reported early today.

Official and semiofficial advices gave this picture of the three major battlegrounds in China:

1. A Central News dispatch filed at 8 p. . last night claimed Kinhwa and Lanchi remained in Chinese hands after bloody fighting in heavy rain all day yesterday.

2. The Chinese high command announced the capture of more than ten points on the outskirts of Ichang, Japanese-held stronghold on the Yangtze River, above Hankow, in Central China.

3. A Japanese unit thrusting deeper into Yunnan Province, in southwest China, from Lungling, was ambushed and wiped out.

The attention of the Chinese appeared centered on the Chekiang fighting, although it was indicated that the sudden burst of activity around Ichang, in Hupen Province, hundreds of miles west of Chekiang Province, was intended as indirect relief for the beleaguered Chinese in the eastern battlefield.

In south Honan Province, neighbor to Hupeh, the Chinese reported an attack on Fushan, near the Japanese base of Sinyang, inflicted losses on the enemy last Saturday.

The Chinese air force and its American counterpart, the A. V. G., bombed and strafed the Japanese in Yunnan Province.

Nazis Halted Short of Egypt

By Edward Kennedy
Associated Press Staff Writer

Cairo, Egypt, May 29.—British tanks repulsed a German armored force that charged within 50 miles of the Egyptian border today as Allied and Axis forces fought bitter, wide-ranging battles all around the approaches to Tobruk.

Land fighting was almost entirely between tank forces, with hundreds of machines ranging through a 50-mile-wide strip east and southeast of Ain el Gazala.

Here and there an artillery strong point blasted away, forcing Axis tanks to give ground, and overhead the R. A. F. was busy with incessant bombing. Axis air activity was reported considerably reduced.

British headquarters regarded the situation as satisfactory. None of the fixed British land positions has been taken, and the British said developments had not gone as the Germans anticipated because the attackers have not reached Tobruk.

The Axis onslaught opened with an attack by Italian tanks on Bir Hacheim—"the well of wisdom"—some 50 miles southwest of Tobruk. Free French forces holding that point hurled back the assault and destroyed at least 35 tanks.

German armored forces with about 250 tanks slipped around Bir Hacheim to the south, apparently intending to nip Tobruk from the rear. Since this aim apparently was thwarted when one German column was turned back at El Adem, 15 miles south of Tobruk, the German forces have tended to split up into smaller groups.

One of these reached Sidi Rezegh, 50 miles west of the Egyptian border and 25 miles southeast of Tobruk, only to be repelled by British tanks.

sumed with a determination to carry the fight into Germany and Japan—the same determination that inspired Jimmie Doolittle and his gallant band."

He urged members of the class to go into the Air Force, because "a unified air force should have a proportion of officers whose viewpoint, moulded by four years in the Corps of Cadets, includes a full understanding of those military intangibles which are epitomized in the motto of the corps."

The chief of staff declared that the pre-war confusion over national policy no longer exists. The wholehearted and united support of the Army, he said, is exemplified by the letters sent to him by the families of men who fought in the Philippines.

"The letters that have come to me from the mothers or wives of men lost in that Homeric struggle are my greatest reassurance that America has steeled itself for a terrible struggle, with the implacable determination to hammer out a complete victory—decisive and final."

Take Half of Town In Furious Battle Street by Street

By Walter Kerr
Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

Moscow, May 29.—Red army forces were reported today to be fighting, street by street and house by house, for possession of an important but virtually ruined city whose name cannot be disclosed immediately, but which formerly served the German army as a supply base for food and ammunition. The city spans a river running through a sector where the Russians have been attacking.

The Germans fought fiercely to hold this city, even driving the attacking Russians out in one strong counterattack, but they are being forced to that part of the locality on the right bank of the river, burning warehouses and historic buildings as they retreat. Russian observers there reported that clouds of black smoke can be seen rising from the city even at night by the flames and flashes of gunfire as the operations continue.

Half of Town Retaken

The Russians control roughly half of the city, a two-day infantry attack supported by artillery and light tanks having won them 24 streets, apparently in the eastern district.

The Germans previously had rejected surrender terms offered by the Russians after they broke through the outer defenses and besieged the city on both flanks. Faced with the prospect of beating down the Germans' resistance, the Russian commander employed the help of guerilla forces to get one of his lieutenants and two soldier scouts into the city to study its defenses.

The scouting party successfully carried out its mission, returning three days later to report that the city would have to be stormed.

The Russians moved at midnight, seizing an outlying village, but were halted in the suburbs by artillery fire from the defenders, who knew the range to every point on the city's approaches. Russian heavy guns were rushed up to destroy the enemy's positions and pave the way for infantry, which battered a way through the outlying streets.

Fighting was bitter, especially when both sides controlled part of the same building.

Nazis Counterattack

At this point the Germans made their counterthrust, sending the Red army units back to their original positions. The Russian commander examined his strategy and decided that in the next attack it would be necessary for the Russians to fortify every house and building as it was captured.

Supported this time by engineers, the Russian infantrymen reentered the city and were met, at the first street, by cross-fire from machine guns and a partly buried tank. Rifle and submachine gun fire from nearby houses blazed into the Russian ranks, and for a desperate hour or so it appeared the assault would falter.

Again the artillery came to the infantry's aid, blasting six machine gun nests and wrecking the tank.

The Russians inched along, battling at every corner against Germans entrenched in groups of 25 to 30 men behind barricades of logs and earth and in ditches. Here again the Russian big guns came into play.

Planes Reinforce Defense

At night the defenders received reinforcements and food supplies dropped by parachute from transport planes.

One prisoner said 1500 German wounded could not be removed from the city because the Russians controlled all the roads leading out. At least 1000 Germans were killed in a two-day period, 500 of them in fighting for one street.

An instance typical of the fighting occurred when the Germans entrenched themselves in a brick building whose doors and windows were blocked. The Russian artillery blasted a hole through the wall and infantrymen stormed through the gap, seizing the ground floor. The Germans held the upper stories for about 36 hours, but finally capitulated when the Russians brought up heavy machine guns and fired laterally and zigzag through the ceiling.

Kharkov for the second straight communique, dismissing it with the report that there were no significant changes on sectors other than the Izyum-Barvenkova front.

(The German high command announced that the Germans were mopping up the Kharkov battleground with the "number of prisoners and amount of booty mounting steadily." Military circles said the Kharkov battle was ended.

(The German high command also said a Soviet attack on the Central Front, presumably before Moscow, was repulsed, with some of the attacking Russians encircled.)

The Russian mid-day communique said a Red unit operating on one unidentified sector of the front threw back a German infantry attack supported by tanks and artillery and destroyed five tanks and one armored car. It also said the Germans left hundreds of dead on the battlefields.

Allies Dump 5 Jap Planes Into Coral Sea

By the Associated Press

Allied Headquarters, Australia (Saturday), May 30.—Allied airmen shot down five Japanese planes over the Coral Sea 60 miles southeast of Port Moresby yesterday, while two other air units rained explosives on Japanese bases in Timor and New Britain Islands, General MacArthur's headquarters announced today.

Three Japanese planes also were damaged, and one Allied plane was missing in the combat at sea which occurred when Australia's defending airmen encountered a flight of 18 Japanese naval Zero planes.

Allied planes scored hits on buildings in Japanese-occupied Dili on the Island of Timor, and all the raiders returned safely.

Dili is the capital and chief port of the Portuguese half of Timor, and is about 500 miles northwest of Port Darwin, Australia.

The big Allied bombers also made a night attack on Rabaul, New Britain, scattering explosives on the wharf area where two large fires were started. All the raiding planes likewise returned to their bases from that mission.

Natives Stamp Out Air Field, 70 Refugees Escape

By Lee Van Atta
International News Service Staff Writer

Melbourne, May 29.—The story of how 2000 New Guinea natives organized a three-night dancing party which stamped out a makeshift airdrome and enabled 70 refugees to be taken to Australia by air was told for the first time today.

The refugee party battled its way for weeks through the dense jungles of New Guinea, only to realize there was no possible way of escape.

At a certain location, a Catholic priest came to their aid. He walked 530 miles back to the point the party started from and managed to salvage an old plane.

The priest, who had flown several times previously, flew back to the party and told them he would make for Australia to seek aid.

The priest took off for Australia, but the plane's ancient engine broke down and the priest made a forced landing. Then he secured a native canoe and calmly and confidently paddled off to Australia.

One of the strangest parts of the story is that the priest managed to reach Australia, but he did.

A month passed before a rescuing plane came over to rescue the refugees. The big plane managed to get down, but the ground was too soft for it to take off again.

So an explorer persuaded the natives to start a marathon dance. It continued for three nights. At the end of that time a large field had been stamped down almost to the hardness of concrete.

War Writers See Big Tank Display in Australia

Allied Headquarters, Australia, May 29 (AP).—The largest assemblage of tanks ever gathered in Australia, bulking strangely in flat farm fields, has been shown to United States correspondents on a tour of group training operations.

All were impressed by the large amount of new equipment available in this theater of war.

Conducted by Capt. R. Denison, press officer for Gen. Sir Thomas Blamey, commander of the Allied land forces in Australia, correspondents watched American troops carry out field exercises and fire mortars, and for the first time witnessed Australian soldiers training in American tanks and other vehicles.

Throughout most of a 35-mile blitz-buggy tour earlier in the day we saw American squads deploying through fields on both sides of the roads in extremely warlike exercises.

'Go Get 'Em' McClusky Wins Flying Cross for Saving Carrier

By the Associated Press

Pearl Harbor, T. H., May 29.—Go-Get-'Em McCluskey, they call Lieut. Comdr. Clarence W. McCluskey of Buffalo, N. Y., upon whom Admiral Chester W. Nimitz, commander in chief of the Pacific Fleet, pinned the Distinguished Flying Cross Wednesday.

The award was made for McCluskey's feat in leading a group of fighter planes in beating off a Japanese bomber attack on an aircraft carrier during a raid by the United States Navy on the Gilbert and Marshall Islands.

Over the radio circuit between plane and ship went this terse command:

"There is a four-motor job up there about to make a run. Go get 'em, McCluskey."

McCluskey replied: "Aye, aye, captain."

Then he pulled out of formation and approached the bomber from the rear. The bomber pilot, realizing the vulnerability of a tail attack, headed for the clouds.

Ship observers saw both planes enter a cloud which concealed the terrific sky conflict.

First a piece of tail assembly dropped out. Then part of a wing section appeared. After it came sundry parts of wreckage. Smoke billowed around the edges of the cloud.

There were several seconds of anxiety. Then out of one side of the cloud shot McCluskey's plane.

Then came the chortling voice:

"I got—I got him good, by God, fellows. I shot his tail off."

"Nice going, McCluskey," replied the squadron commander.

seized as hostages, were in danger of execution. Property of executed persons is seized by the State.

During the day, along with persistent rumors of Heydrich's death, news of Adolf Hitler's latest Nazi party purge in which 13 high officials were reported imprisoned, spread through Europe and was given increased credence.

There was little doubt that Hitler was demanding bloody reprisals from the people of Bohemia and Moravia for Wednesday's attack on Heydrich as he was motoring to Berlin just outside Prague.

[Meanwhile, Netherlands sources said more than 100 Dutchmen have been executed by Nazi occupational authorities in Holland in little more than a week, according to the International News Service in London.

[In addition, it was stated, 460 persons were arrested as hostages, while 2000 former officers and cadets have been placed in internment camps.]

The report of Heydrich's death began circulating in Bern. The British radio noted that it had not been confirmed and quoted the German radio as saying his condition was "serious."

The Daily Mail, in a dispatch dated "the German frontier," said Heydrich "died tonight in a small private hospital in Prague according to unconfirmed reports from neutral sources."

Hours before the report, an Exchange Telegraph dispatch from Zurich, Switzerland, said a German specialist had been rushed to Prague for an emergency operation. This report said Heydrich's spinal cord and spine were critically injured when three bullets hit him.

Martial law has been proclaimed in Bohemia and Moravia, and midnight tonight was the deadline for registration of all Czech males over 15.

While the worst was expected in retaliatory measures, the Czech government here nevertheless called on Czechs in the homeland to resist their Nazi oppressors.

"There will be no peace and right in the world unless the German crimes are severely punished," said a proclamation issued for broadcasting. "Whoever defiles himself by collaboration with the murderous enemy will not escape just punishment."

A Czech government spokesman in London said advices from the continent indicated the Nazis had arrested hundreds of officials, university professors and students for questioning, concentrating particularly on "intellectual types" including some puppet executives.

The Moscow radio said unrest was spreading through Belgium, where eight Boy Scouts and their chaplain had been seized by the Gestapo.

The Belgian government news agency also carried this report.

From Stockholm came word that Norwegian patriots on the island of Sotra, opposite Bergen, had shot to death the Nazi Gestapo chief of western Norway, after which the entire male population of the village had been arrested, their families evacuated and their homes burned.

Court Upholds Award Of $7500 for Finger

One finger assumed the value of $7,500 for John T. Varner yesterday when Justice Oscar R. Luhring denied a motion in District Court to set aside a verdict for that sum against John E. Hinkel.

Varner had claimed an amputation was necessary after his finger was injured when a bathtub faucet broke in a house owned by Hinkel.

Services Pay Rise Tied Up In Deadlocked Conference

Pay increases for all branches of the armed forces last night were caught fast in a conference deadlock over House insistence on a $50 monthly minimum for privates and apprentice seamen, while the Senate stood for $42.

No additional conferences were scheduled and it was said in one informed quarter that the adamant conferees may not meet again until mid-June.

The controversy already had cost soldiers, sailors, marines and members of the Coast Guard proposed increases for June and raises even by July were imperiled. The bill cannot take effect until the first day of the calendar month following enactment.

The conference committee was reported divided, 4 and 4. All of the Senate conferees except Chairman Reynolds (Democrat) of North Carolina, held out for the $42 minimum approved by the Senate and favored by the Administration. All but one of the House conferees insisted on the $50 minimum twice approved by the House. One Senate and one House conferee were absent.

Senator Johnson (Democrat) of Colorado, Senate author of the bill, last night voiced concern lest the fight endanger all the benefits in the bill.

Trailer Camp Set Up for Evicted Groups

The first Washington families who had to move out of their homes to make way for the war expansion program got new roofs over their heads yesterday wtih the opening of a trailer park between First and Second and R and T Streets in the Southwest.

They were 106 Negro families uprooted by building at the Navy Yard. They have 150 trailers among them, with three trailers the maximum that can go to any family.

Spaced 20 feet apart, the trailers have sleeping space for four persons. They contain each an ice box, an electric stove, a heating stove, a sink, five windows, two air ventilators in the roof, four chairs, a drop-leaf table, screen doors, two closets, hatracks, storage space, and a fire extinguisher. Also, each has blackout curtains.

The tract on which the trailers have been put up, following their being towed here from Detroit, is 450 by 650 feet. In the center of the tract are wooden buildings that provide toilets, showers, wash basins, laundry tubs and ironing boards. Drinking water comes from eleven water service units.

George Handy will stay on the site and serve as manager of the trailer park project. M. D. Dunlap is superintendent and Jeffrees-Dyer, Inc., the contractors for the first trailer suburb inside the District—other than that for transients at the tourist park.

At the War Production Board yesterday it was declared all new housing in the future would be determined by absolute need, with complete exhaustion of local facilities a requisite to starting new projects.

"Is there no other way in the world this can be solved except by new construction?" a WPB official said was the question with which each new housing problem would be met.

"If it comes to a choice between planes or guns and houses, we know what choice the American people would want us to make," he declared.

In the meantime, however, the National Home Builders Association received assurance from "responsible officials of the housing branches of the WPB" that adequate priorities would be extended and freeze orders relaxed to expedite early completion of more than 100,000 war housing units under construction by private builders.

Each future project must take its chances along with all other needs of the country, but assurance that those started would be completed was hailed at a meeting here as a considerable victory.

"Every official at the meeting showed a constructive attitude toward the current problem of operative home building in America," it was declared by NHBA officials yesterday. "But they convinced the WPB they had to have priorities for completing the projects under way—or go broke."

Huge 'Cut' on Contracts Aired

Tells of Getting Naval Contracts

Griswold, of Erie, Pa., president of the Griswold Manufacturing Co., one of those with which Stone had an agreement, and said:

"Do you think that it was necessary to go to these parasites, who neither toil nor spin, in order to do business with your own Government? It's you people who build up these parasites who feed on the taxpayers and whose fee is added to the price of war work."

"I resent that," he protested again when Vinson observed that correspondence between Stone and some of the company executives indicated Stone had intimated he had influence and "pull" in the Navy Department.

"I had no pull," Stone said. "I worked and worked, assiduously, night and day." He added that he began obtaining contracts after resigning as a Federal Housing Administration employe, at a time when it was "most difficult" for the Government to get manufacturers to convert their plants to production of war goods.

He flatly denied a charge by Edmund Toland, committee counsel, that he took prospective clients to the Navy Department in an effort to impress them. He said he had given up his "life time job" with the FHA only after the Navy's judge advocate general had approved the structure of his percentage arrangement.

He testified that he had obtained about nine million dollars worth of contracts for the Lionel Corporation of Irving, N. J., but that about three million dollars of that amount was subject to contract cancellation.

In addition to the Lionel Corporation and the Griswold Manufacturing Co., he acknowledged that he had similar agreements with the Lee Tire and Rubber Co. of Conshohocken, Pa., and the Unique Arts Manufacturing Co.

John A. Underwood, another manufacturing executive, said he had refused to enter into a similar agreement with Stone because "adding 5 per cent commission to war contracts was a little too much."

Underwood, then president of a New Britain, Conn., company and now assistant to the president of Johnson & Johnson, of New Brunswick, N. J., said that he had disclosed to the Navy details of his conversations and correspondence with Stone, a move which led to the Navy Committee's inquiry.

The committee decided to send copies of the transcript of yesterday's session to the Navy Department and the Comptroller General. Vinson said it would be up to officials of those two bureaus to decide whether the fees paid to Stone could be withheld or recaptured.

"I want to thank you," the chairman told Underwood. "If the other manufacturers would do the same thing, we would break up this belief that you need a special agent to obtain contracts with your own Government, and stop this hue and cry throughout the country."

Stone testified he had worked for the FHA for seven years and had been in the mortgage business in Newark, N. J., before his connection with the Government.

Hiring people was no picnic to Mr. Perry

...but NOW it is!

The door flew open. A pretty girl looked in and said, "Is something wrong?"

MR. PERRY sat alone in his office. All alone.

His stenog had quit to get married. His file clerk had become a nurse. His star salesman was in the Air Corps. Even his office boy was out, to lunch. Suddenly . .

Mr. Perry let out a loud, long moan.

"I can't stand it!" he cried. "My business is good—but I need more help. Help! HELP!"

The door flew open. A pretty girl looked in and said, "Is something wrong?"

"Everything's wrong!" shouted Mr. Perry. "I need office help, sales help! My wife needs a new cook! But hiring people is no picnic these days. Gr-rr-r."

"It could be—if you put a Help Wanted Ad in The Post," said the girl. "That paper really works fast! That's how my boss across the hall hired me."

Mr. Perry called a Post Ad-writer right away—and now he's no longer alone. In fact, he's so pleased with the people he hired, he's taking them all for a picnic—next Sunday!

Conviction Asked

2 Denounced As Agents in Pay of Japs

By Dillard Stokes
Post Staff Writer

Two Americans on trial for conspiring with Japanese agents were denounced by Special Prosecutor Arthur B. Caldwell yesterday as worse than the Japanese who paid them to spread Tokyo's propaganda in this country.

Caldwell demanded the conviction of Frederick Vincent Williams, an admitted agent of the Japanese, and David Warren Ryder. The men have been on trial three weeks before Justice T. Alan Goldsborough in the District Court.

They are accused of violating the Foreign Agents Act and entering into a conspiracy with five Japanese and the Japanese agent, Ralph Townsend. One of the Japanese, Tsutomu Obana, pleaded guilty and four got away to Japan. Townsend also admitted violating the Foreign Agents Act. Obana was a Government witness.

Of the Japanese, Caldwell said: "Because of our laws, they never could become citizens. When we consider the worst they did, we still must acknowledge that they were serving their motherland the best they could. That's more than we can say of Ryder and Williams."

Williams, a plump, bald man in a blue suit, sat blinking through Caldwell's scornful conclusion. Ryder leaned forward, listening tensely. A slight, elderly man, he several times ran his hand through his gray hair.

Special Prosecutor Albert E. Arent analyzed the evidence in the case Thursday.

Justice Goldsborough ordered a recess until Monday, after the arguments were over. He said he would give the jurors his instructions and leave the decision to them sometime Monday.

Meanwhile, H. Victor Broenstrepp, coordinator of the policies of the defeatist press, was questioned before the special grand jury on Axis agents. With his release, the jurors adjourned until next week. Special Prosecutor William Power Maloney said the inquiry will require considerable investigation in other cities before the jurors convene again.

Bell Loses $6000 Job; Viewed as Reprisal For Murray's Ouster

By the Associated Press

The C. I. O. took a turn at purging yesterday and fired its comptroller, J. R. Bell, brother-in-law of John L. Lewis.

On Thursday Lewis removed Philip Murray, president of the C. I. O., from the $18,000-a-year position of vice president of the United Mine Workers, which Lewis heads. Lewis and Murray, coworkers for years, have recently been estranged.

Murray was not available for comment on Bell's dismissal. C. I. O. Secretary James B. Carey said the job was being abolished and he would do the work. It was an appointive position and paid $6000.

It was reported yesterday that certain friends of Murray would soon be removed, or would resign, from positions in the United Mine Workers.

Martin Wagner, international executive board member for District 50 of the U. M. W., who cast the lone dissenting vote on the removal of Murray, was considered marked for dismissal, as was Van A. Bittner, president of District 17 in southern West Virginia. Wagner said last night he had no plans to resign.

3 D. C. Men To Get G. W. Alumni Award

Three Washingtonians are among six distinguished graduates of George Washington University named to receive the Alumni Achievement Award at the university's 121st annual commencement next Wednesday night in Constitution Hall.

The Washingtonians are Dr. Luther H. Reichelderfer, 1661 Crescent Place Northwest, former District Commissioner and now a prominent physician; Harold F. Enlows, 2753 Brandywine Street Northwest, national director of first aid, water safety and accident - prevention service, American Red Cross; Watson Davis, 1422 Rhode Island Avenue Northwest, director of Science Service and prominent writer.

Other graduates to receive the award are Dr. Nevil M. Hopkins, New York City; Miss Elizabeth W. Wilson, Cambridge, Mass., and Alexander Wilbourne Weddell, former Ambassador to Spain.

Robert V. Fleming, president of Riggs National Bank, was reelected chairman, board of trustees of the university at the annual meeting of the board yesterday. Arthur Peter, Washington attorney, was reelected vice chairman, Harry C. Davis and Henry P. Erwin were again named secretary and assistant secretary, respectively.

A dinner will be given in honor of the recipients of the award at 8 o'clock tonight at the home of Dr. Cloyd Heck Marvin, president of the university, 2601 Thirtieth Street Northwest. Many officers of the general alumni association, trustees of the university and former recipients of the award will be present.

Tokyo Bombing Spread Terror, Japs Admit

The Office of Facts and Figures quoted Minister of Justice Iwamura yesterday as admitting in a Japanese broadcast that the American raid on Japan April 18 "terrorized" the population and threatened public morale.

OFF said Iwamura, demanding vigorous punishment for persons who spread confusing rumors, declared:

"It is needless for me to say at this time that it is important to act swiftly and severely in the arrest and punishment of all crimes that disturb peace and order under wartime conditions.

"Especially when emergency circumstances arise, as happened in a recent air raid, it is natural that the people became terrorized, and it is to be feared it will have a serious and unbearable effect upon the peace and order of the country."

Six U. S. Fliers, Four From R.A.F., Die in Crashes

Denver, May 29 (AP).—Six persons, five of them Army men, were killed today in the crash of a medium twin-engined bomber from Lowry Air School into a pasture 12 miles southeast of Greeley.

Lowry Field officers said these five occupants were identified positively:

Lieut. Joe De Grade, Lieut. Carlos R. Kibler, Sergt. Alec Chavarro, Corpl. James O. Flournoy and Corpl. Louis Garcia.

The sixth victim was identified tentatively as Edwin P. Kelly, a civilian employe at the air school.

Addresses of the victims were withheld.

Vancouver, B. C., May 29 (INS).—Four members of the R. A. F. plunged to their deaths this afternoon when their plane crashed into the Pacific Ocean near the town of Sidney off Vancouver Island.

Names of the men and details of the crash were not revealed.

Application Line at WAAC Grows Thin

Applications for the first and only officers' training school provided for the Women's Army Auxiliary Corps went more slowly yesterday, with only around 150 women going to District recruiting offices at Eleventh Street and New York Avenue to pick up blanks.

This brings the District total of applicants to more than 1500, however—and only 50 can be selected from this entire Army corps area, and the girls have until June 4 to apply.

Older Women Apply

More older women came yesterday, according to Capt. F. S. Sloan, who said the flow of applicants was steady throughout the day and the questions asked just about the same.

Booklets answering questions about the WAAC's have been exhausted since the first day, but the War Department said no more can be printed. "We got out 100,000 and believe the taxpayers would object to printing any more, a WAAC headquarters official said yesterday.

In addition to wondering how they ever can get the 450 best women from among the maybe 100,000 applicants, the War Department officers interested in the WAAC are worrying about the underwear which will be issued to members of the corps as part of their uniform.

Director Oveta Culp Hobby will be in New York this weekend for another conference on the undies question. Whether it still involves the matter of a girdle—or whether that already has been settled—remains a "military secret." It has been promised, however, that the undies will be ready by the time the officers' school opens at Fort Des Moines, Iowa, around July 15.

Girls Will Like 'Em

Also, it is promised, the issue will be something the girls will like to wear. "Nobody will be going out to spend some of her $50 monthly allowance on a different variety," the WAAC headquarters official says.

Captain Sloan said more older women appeared among the District applicants yesterday, the information having got around that women between 45 and 49 can apply for the officers' school, although they must pay their fare to Fort Des Moines—and then back again if they don't get commissioned.

Norfolk Captain Dies In Torpedo Sinking

Norfolk, Va., May 29 (AP).—Capt. Fred G. Martin of Norfolk, well known in shipping circles all along the Atlantic Coast, was killed when his ship was torpedoed about a month ago in Southern waters, the Navy Department has notified his brother, John C. Martin of Norfolk.

No further details as to how the Norfolk man met his death have been received by his brother. Captain Martin's wife, who lives in San Antonio, Tex., has also received only the information that he was killed.

Captain Martin was a lieutenant in the Naval Reserve during World War I and skippered a troop ship. He was never torpedoed. After the war he returned to the Merchant Marine.

Action Looms To Clip Wings Of Henderson

By the Associated Press

Talk of curbing the powers of Price Administrator Leon Henderson was heard on Capitol Hill yesterday, as influential members of Congress joined in the opposition to nation-wide gasoline rationing.

Chairman Steagall (Democrat), Alabama, of the House Banking Committee, which handled the bill delegating the powers wielded by Henderson, commented that perhaps Congress had "made a mistake," and added that "no such power as that man has should be given to one man."

During the day, three Senators, Brown (Democrat), Michigan; Taft (Republican), Ohio, and Danaher (Republican), Connecticut, asked Henderson to avoid gasoline rationing in the Middle West except as a last resort measure for conserving tires.

They called on the Price Administrator and afterward said that while Henderson would make no definite statement, they were confident there would be no severe rationing in that area.

Meanwhile, Speaker Rayburn (Democrat) of Texas expressed his opposition to Nation-wide gasoline rationing, as a means of conserving tires, saying:

"Talk about tires. People will ration themselves because they know that when they are worn out they won't get any more for quite a while."

In stating his position, Rayburn aligned himself with the two Senators from his State, Connally and O'Daniel, who have joined with other Senators from oil producing States to fight an extension of the gasoline rationing system.

The Senate's Small Business Committee proposed, meanwhile, that 3000 tons of rubber be made available for the manufacture of 30 million retreads made principally from reclaimed rubber.

However, National Rubber Coordinator Arthur B. Newhall stuck to his position that Nation-wide gasoline rationing was the only feasible method of conserving tires.

"I don't see any other way to do it," he said.

Oden Testifies In New Trial For Murder

Taking the stand for the first time in his retrial, Guy E. Oden, slayer of his 15-year-old sweetheart, grinned sheepishly as he testified in District Court yesterday that his home life had been unhappy.

James J. Laughlin, his attorney, had questioned the 20-year-old former theater usher for only 5 minutes when Justice F. Dickinson Letts halted the proceedings and adjourned court until Monday morning.

Testimony to determine whether Oden had confessed voluntarily to police was continued yesterday by officers connected with the preparation of written statements made by Oden shortly after the fatal shooting July 19.

Oden is expected to reappear Monday in a final effort to show that his confessions were not made willingly. Unless Justice Letts rules that the confessions are admissible as evidence, Assistant United States Attorney Bernard Margolius will introduce further police testimony.

Earlier yesterday Lieut. Aubrey Tolson of the homicide squad related the circumstances surrounding Oden's surrender to the police.

"I asked him why he had done it," Tolson said. Oden's answer, according to the detective, was: "I shot her because I loved her."

Rep. Shannon Stricken; Condition Critcal

Kansas City, May 29 (AP).—Critically ill, Representative Joseph B. Shannon (Democrat), Missouri, arrived by train tonight from St. Louis and was taken to St. Luke's Hospital.

Returning to his Kansas City home from Washington where he had been ill with colitis, Shannon, 75, suffered a cerebral hemorrhage earlier today on a train near St. Louis. He was unconscious on his arrival here.

Motorists Face Stay-at-Home Holiday With Gas Stocks Low

Washington today will begin its Memorial Day weekend with what appeared last night to be gasoline sufficient only for strictly business purposes.

Many filling stations are completely out of gas, and have been for several days or more, and most of the others are holding their customers to short rations, regardless of what type rationing card they may possess.

The situation cannot be remedied, under the quota system, until Monday when the stations will be allowed to secure from the wholesalers as much as one-third of their allowance for the month.

Two of the larger wholesalers reported last night that "many" of their retail outlets had already exhausted their supply of gas but were unable to furnish any definite figures as to the exact number of stations in this status.

However, the situation has been growing more acute for the past several days and it seemed virtually certain last night that anyone who wheels out the family bus today for a weekend jaunt to the beach or countryside will use laboriously saved fuel.

Meantime, the office of Gas Rationing Chief L. P. Steuart reported that its projected investigation of the holders of X and B gasoline cards must await the completion of filing of duplicate cards—a tremendous task complicated by a shortage of personnel. The probe will be started as soon after June 1 "as practical," it was stated, but it appeared that this would not be before the latter part of next week—if then.

The office announced also that nine more rationing boards, in addition to the six already established, will open Monday morning. Personnel of the boards will be announced later.

collect insurance on Jones' car.

Mrs. Kitsoulis, interviewed by police at Casualty Hospital through Detective John Apostolides, who acted as interpreter, said she was on the second floor of the home at Quebec Place with her five-months-old daughter when she heard the explosion.

She said she ran down to the first floor, out the back door and to the garage, from which smoke was pouring. She opened the doors, she said, and was lashed by tongues of flame, which ignited her clothing. She ran screaming into an adjoining alley. When firemen arrived the smoke and fire were so severe that they were unable to enter the garage.

The little boy's aunt said she did not know James was in the car.

Meanwhile, Mrs. Milton Kitsoulis, the little boy's mother, rushed into the alley calling her son's name. Not knowing whether he was in the car, several firemen went in the house to look for him and others pushed the still burning car into the alley. His body escaped notice in the first cursory look, but two police officers, off duty, opened the back door and found his body on the floor.

The aunt was taken to Casualty Hospital immediately, while the remaining members of the large Greek family set up a chanting dirge on the front porch. Although most of the words were in their native tongue, a long wail of "Jim-m-m-m-y" and "my bobo, my bobo" was heard for a block.

The dead child's grandmother, Mrs. Pauline Kitsoulis, was particularly affected. Neighbors said that Jimmy was her particular favorite of the four small Kitsoulis children.

The father, who hurried home later, had to be led from the scene.

Police quoted Zis as saying that the gas, which he declared was purchased before the advent of gasoline rationing, was stored in the three drums which he kept in a garage, not far from a door leading into the basement of the house.

In the basement is located a gas water heater, and police theorized that fumes escaping from the gas, which was being poured into the car, came into contact with the heater and set off the blast and subsequent fire.

Separate investigations into the explosion are being conducted by the fire marshal's and coroner's offices.

Warning: Only 1 Gallon Of Gas Allowed in House

District police regulations dealing with the handling and storage of gasoline and other inflammables, including ether, naptha, benzol, collodian and acetone, require that permits be obtained for the storage of more than 1 gallon in any dwelling, apartment house or tenement; for more than 6 gallons in any other building, and for more than 10 gallons outside of any building.

In buildings where special rooms of reinforced concrete or brick have been provided, gas may be stored in sealed containers or safety cans of not more than 5 gallons capacity and not exceeding a total of 10 gallons. The mixing, storing or handling of inflammables in open containers is prohibited in any building used as a dwelling in whole or in part.

Maryland and Virginia have no State-wide laws against the storage of gasoline in private homes, but nearly all municipalities have local ordinances against it. A regulation expected to become valid within a month will prohibit the storage of more than 5 gallons in a home and will provide that such gas must be in a safety container with a "flame arrester" cap.

Madeline Webb Guilty, Faces Life Term; Two Male Accomplices in Killing Doomed

By Inez Robb
International News Service Staff Writer

New York, May 29.—As she stared hopelessly, a look of stark disbelief in her eyes, Madeline Webb tonight heard an all-male jury condemn her to life imprisonment for the robbery-strangling of Mrs. Susan Flora Reich.

In Madeline's case the jury recommended mercy, thus sparing the 28-year-old former showgirl from Stillwater, Okla., from the electric chair.

But no such recommendation was made on behalf of Madeline's codefendants, her lover, Eli Shonbrun, and John D. Cullen, petty thief and "forgotten man" of the dramatic trial. They were found "guilty as charged" and thus face the electric chair.

For perhaps 15 seconds, Madeline stared unbelievingly and wordlessly after the verdicts were announced.

Then, as if suddenly realizing the import of the jury's words, she broke down.

"Oh, Judge Goldstein!" she cried to Presiding Judge Jonah Goldstein. "Oh, judge! Oh, please! Oh, please, judge!"

She collapsed in her chair, beating the counsel table before her.

Shonbrun's collapse was even more complete. With thoughts only for Madeline, the 33-year-old admitted wife deserter and petty thief went completely to pieces.

His thin frame shaking, Shonbrun sobbed aloud—the wrenching sobs sounding to the furthermost reaches of the courtroom.

"My God! My God!" he screamed. "You're crucifying her—she's as innocent as my mother!"

As the jury was polled, each member being asked in turn if it was his wish that Madeline be sentenced to life imprisonment, Shonbrun progressively became more and more dejected.

"Oh, my darling!" he cried aloud. "Oh, my darling Madeline! I love you."

A marked contrast was the stolidity of Cullen. His expression remained as changeless as it had been throughout the trial. He sat quietly in his chair, unmoved by the tinctly. "Nine generations an verdict or the cries of his codefendants.

Judge Goldstein, when he had heard the verdict, thanked the jury in quiet tones.

Then each defendant was called upon to take an oath on the Bible and answer questions as to age, business and so forth. This was the occasion for new outbreaks by both Madeline and Shonbrun.

MADELINE WEBB

The woman's first replies were given calmly, as she said she was 28 years old and born in Stillwater, Okla. When asked the question, "Are you an American?" she again flared.

"Very proudly!" she said dis-American!"

As to her occupation, Madeline emphasized that she "was" an actress. After she had said she was single, and that her mother was living, she was led from the court.

This, too, brought further dramatics, for as a policeman and other court attendants sought to aid her, she shook th emoff, snapping: "Don't hold me! I'm all right. Don't hold me!"

She rose from her chair and began to walk firmly from the court. She slowed as she reached the door, however, and her arm then was taken by the matron.

Shonbrun said he would be 34 years old next month. Then his occupation was asked. Wrenching around to stare directly at the prosecutor, Assistant District Attorney Jacob Grumet, he snarled:

"My business is a murderer—just like Grumet!"

Asked his nationality, Shonbrun again became bitter.

"I'm not a Jew," he said defiantly. "I don't believe any more."

Again he turned to Grumet, crying:

"He's just crucified a girl, as they did 2000 years ago. He could have killed me five times over! He just framed that girl."

As Shonbrun was led from court, three police officers placed themselves between him and Grumet.

A pitiful figure, who has sat quietly in the court building throughout the trial, was Madeline's mother, Mrs. Vera Webb. Weeping, she left the building with a newspaper covering her head and face. When a reporter attempted to comfort her by saying, "Well, Madeline got a break in getting life," the mother, sobbing, replied:

"I don't think so."

The jury retired at 12:31 p. m., and returned its verdicts just before six.

Mrs. Reich, elderly and well-to-do Polish refugee for whose murder the three were convicted, was found suffocated to death in the Hotel Sutton the morning of March 5. Her body, taped, bound and gagged, was found in a room previously occupied by Madeline and Shonbrun.

The State contended that Madeline, who had a slight acquaintance with the victim, had lured her to the hotel room for the purpose of robbery.

Former Bootlegger Calmly Confesses Slaying of Five

By International News Service

Union City, N. J., May 29.—A calm confession to five murders was made tonight by Vincenzo Piazza, 59-year-old former bootlegger, Union City police announced.

Piazza, a stooped, swarthy man with a gray, speckled mustache, was alleged by authorities to have killed a man and his wife in Union City, two men in Cleveland, Ohio, and another man at Geneva-on-Lakes, near Cleveland.

The prisoner was arrested, police stated, when he returned to Union City to carry out a sixth murder, that of a 20-year-old woman, Mary Mancini, whom he accused of revealing his whereabouts.

According to police, Piazza's victims were:

John Jandik, 46, and his wife, Mabel, 29, of Union City. Both were killed in their home by blasts from a shotgun and a revolver on January 26, 1933.

Onofrio Trizzino, 47, Piazza's brother - in - law, and Onofrio's brother, Joseph. One was shot and the other stabbed with a butcher knife at their home in Cleveland on February 11, 1939. Piazza had sought refuge there after fleeing from Union City, police said.

James (Big Jim) Dama, Youngstown, Ohio, barkeeper, who was slain last September 14 at Geneva-on-Lakes.

Five Sentenced In Cemetery Lot Fraud

Describing as a "gang of thieves" six salesmen of options on cemetery lots who were alleged to have duped more than 100 Washingtonians in amounts totaling $26,000, Justice T. Alan Goldsborough yesterday sentenced five of them to prison terms and ordered the sixth to trial in District Court next fall.

The men were charged with spuriously operating a business involving hundreds of unsuspecting investors in cities throughout the Atlantic Seaboard and the Middle West. In Washington—the last city in which the fleecing occurred—the six men are said to have sold options for burial lots at Memorial Estates Cemetery Park on Baltimore Boulevard.

The five who pleaded guilty and received sentences were Richard D. Simon, George V. Arlen and H. L. Sarshik, who were given prison terms of eight months to two years, and Ralph V. Moohr and J. C. Hermann, who were sentenced to four months to one year.

The sixth defendant, Kenneth B. Martin, withdrew his plea of guilty and will be tried here. Attorney David C. Spiegel of New York entered a plea of mercy for his client, saying Martin had already suffered mentally, for his crime.

To this Justice Goldsborough replied: "It was a calculated scheme to defraud, and the investors suffered a lot of torture, too. Many of them were poor people."

Tax Plans Face Scaling Down

tion may be asked by leading members to reconsider its own position on the sales tax. The Treasury would be unlikely to reverse its present opposition unless directed to do so by the President. On the other hand, a sales tax would have a rough time in the House if the President bluntly opposed it even as a last resort tax medium.

President Roosevelt meanwhile at a press conference wholeheartedly indorsed Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau's crackdown on excessive salaries, unearned bonuses and inflated expenses used by a few corporations as a tax-dodging method.

D.C. Churchmen Lay Plans to Attend Summer Religious Conferences

Annual Annapolis Retreat Is Now In Full Swing

By Robert Tate Allan
Post Church Editor

Throngs of churchmen from the Nation's Capital are planning to attend various religious conferences and retreats on nearby college campuses and other places this summer.

The new retreat year at Manresa-on-the-Severn, Catholic Archdiocesan retreat house at Annapolis, already is in full swing under the leadership of the Rev. Robert S. Lloyd, S.J., director of the house.

The annual teachers' and young people's conference sponsored by the D.C. Sunday School Association will take place at Western Maryland College, Westminster, on June 19, 20 and 21. "Facing Facts with Christ" will be the theme. The Rev. Dr. Clarence W. Cranford, pastor of Calvary Baptist Church, will be conference speaker.

Methodist Assembly

The second annual Methodist Young Adult Assembly of the Baltimore Conference will be held on the same campus June 26 to 28, under the leadership of Walter A. Graham, of Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church here, conference director and assembly dean. It will be sponsored by the Baltimore conference board of education, of which the Rev. John C. Millian is executive secretary.

FATHER LLOYD

The ninth annual youth conference of the Washington Diocese, Episcopal Church, will take place at Piney Point Hotel, Piney Point, St. Marys County, Md., June 18 to 28.

For many years the Episcopal youth conferences have been held at Overall, Va., but this year the place has been changed, as 1942 marks the 250th anniversary of the establishment of eight Episcopal parishes in southern Maryland. This year also commemorates the 150th anniversary of the consecration of Thomas John Clagett as first Bishop of Maryland and first Episcopal bishop to be consecrated on American soil.

Western Maryland College Parley Set Next Month

Lawyers' Retreat

George H. O'Connor, president of the District Title Company, will head the District lawyers' retreat to Manresa June 12-15. Distinguished guests will include Associate Justice Matthew McGuire of the United States District Court, and Charles Fahy, solicitor general in the Department of Justice.

Mount Vernon Place Church Offers Saturday Entertainment

With gas rationing confining many people to their own communities, many residents of the Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church neighborhood, 900 Massachusetts Avenue Northwest, are looking forward to the Saturday evening sound movies and other entertainment in the church hall.

Marvin H. Wurtz, photographer for the Metropolitan Police Department, is directly responsible for the programs which are drawing hundreds of youngsters.

Recently the problem of peanuts, candy and even rice (Chinese children come, too) on the floor became so acute that something had to be done.

Children were warned that one chapter of the films would be skipped whenever the floors were left dirty after a performance. When the next show was unreeled there was not a peanut shell around.

New Interfaith Bodies' Aims Are Described

(The following story describes five of the new departments which the National Conference of Christians and Jews has set up in the war emergency. The sixth new department—Camps and Other Military Bases—was described in yesterday's Washington Post.)

Furthering the aims of the National Conference of Christians and Jews among the Nation's churches and synagogues is the aim of the new Department of Church Cooperation of the Conference.

One of its chief activities will be to set up special committees to further the objectives of the conference though each ecclesiastical body. Such a committee, according to Dr. Everett J. Clinchy, director of the National Conference, is being created by the Congregational-Christian churches and the Methodist Church, and is under consideration by five other denominations. The National Conference, he said, would colloborate with each group.

Expansion of work among the schools and colleges of the Nation will be undertaken by the Department of School Cooperation. A commission of the National Conference already exists for this purpose, headed by Dr. Henry Noble MacCracken, president of Vassar College.

The department will have the responsibility of encouraging, stimulating and aiding intercultural education through the Nation's schools, colleges and universities. The recognized national educational agencies and the U. S. Department of Education will be served. The department will also have charge of the organization's activities in the field of religious education, and will continue cooperation with the International Council of Religious Education.

The department of press, magazine and radio will seek to further cooperation among the three faiths and educate against prejudice through the various public media. In this work it aims to elist the cooperation of editors, writers, dramatists and radio broadcasters.

Religious News Service, which is operated by the national conference as a service to the religious forces of the Nation and to the press, will continue as a separate division and as a strictly religious news service, but it will be expanded to include a feature service. Religious News Service now reaches 15 millions of people through newspapers, magazines and radio stations which subscribe to it.

The National Conference has 12 regional offices through which the new departmental programs will be carried out. The National Conference cochairmen are Professor Arthur H. Compton of Chicago, Carlton J. H. Hayes, recently appointed Ambassador to Spain, and Roger W. Straus of New York.

Eastern Presbyterian Church To Observe 50th Anniversary

The congregation of Eastern Presbyterian Church tomorrow will launch a celebration marking the fiftieth anniversary of the cornerstone laying of the present edifice at Sixth and Maryland Avenue Northeast.

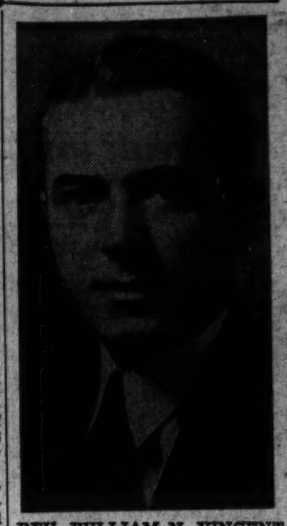
The Rev. William Nesbit Vincent, pastor, will lead the opening service tomorrow at 11 a.m. A "jubilee echoes" program is scheduled for 8 p.m., when women workers of the congregation will be honored. Films and other features are planned.

A "jubilee fellowship" program is slated for Tuesday at 8 p.m., with present and past Christian Endeavorers participating. The jubilee supper will be on Thursday at 6:30 p.m., with the Rev. Dr. Peter Marshall, pastor of New York Avenue Presbyterian Church, speaking.

Eastern Church had its origin on June 18, 1871, when a group of young men from the Fourth Presbyterian Church met at the home of Mr. and Mrs. James W. Hughes, 1016 H Street Northeast, as a Sunday School class.

The class soon outgrew its quarters, and moved during the following autumn to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Betts, Ninth and G Streets Northwest. On May 19, 1875, with thirty-three members, the congregation was incorporated, and a chapel was built at Eighth Street between F and G Northeast.

Former pastors were the Revs. George B. Patch, 1875-81; S. S. Wallen, 1882-83; Eugene Peck, 1884-88; T. K. Noble, 1888-89; Maxwell N. Cornelius, 1890-93; Gustavus R. Alden (assistant), 1892-93; Thomas C. Easton, 1893-1907; Charles L. Nelbel, 1903-12, and Alfred E. Barrows, 1912-40.



REV. WILLIAM N. VINCENT

Concordia to Mark Mission Society's Birth

Concordia Lutheran Evangelical Church will celebbrate the forty-fifth anniversary of its Mission Society tomorrow in the worship and preaching service at 11 a.m. The Rev. Charles Enders will preach on "Christian Witnesses."

The Concordia Mission Society was organized by the Rev. Paul A. Menzel on May 31, 1897. Four of the charter members still are active members of the society: Mrs. P. A. Menzel, Mrs. Lucy Harford, Mrs. A. N. Schroeder and Mrs. William Bruder. The mission society has a record for fostering missionary education and of giving support to missionary and charitable causes. It has given liberally to missionary undertakings of the Evangelical and Reformed Church, the Washington Federation of Churches, the Lutheran Inner Mission, the Gospel Mission and the Central Union Mission.

Christian Science Subject Announced

"Ancient and Modern Necromancy, Alias Mesmerism and Hypnotism, Denounced" is the subject of the lesson-sermon in all the Churches of Christ, Scientist, tomorrow at 11 a.m. and 8 p.m. Sunday school is at 11 a.m. All are cordially invited to attend the church services, including the Wednesday meetings at 8 p.m.

Among the citations which comprise the lesson-sermon is the following from the Bible: "Ye are all the children of light and the children of the day: we are not of the night, nor of darkness." (I Thessalonians 5-5).

The lesson-sermon also includes the following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "Christian Scientists must live under the constant pressure of the apostolic command to come out from the material world and be separate." (Page 451)

To Take Summer Pulpit

The Rev. John Gensel tomorrow will begin his duties as summer assistant pastor at Luther Place Memorial Church, Thomas Circle. Mr. Gensel will preach at 8 p.m. Holy Communion will be celebrated at 9 and 11 a.m., with the Rev. Dr. Charles B. Foelsch officiating.

Rev. Holcomb Assumes Duties At Temple Church Tomorrow

The Rev. Luther J. Holcomb of Durant, Okla., tomorrow will formally assume his duties as new pastor of Temple Baptist Church, Tenth and N Streets Northwest. He succeeds the Rev. Randolph Gregory, who entered Army chaplaincy service.

Mr. Holcomb will preach at 11 a. m. on "Things That Abide" and at 8 p. m. on "A Broken Romance." Sunday school is set for 9:30 a. m. and Young People's Seth Parker meeting at 6:45 p. m., led by Miss Jean Ryan.

This century-old Temple Baptist congregation soon will break ground for a new building at Sixteenth and Juniper Streets Northwest.

Mr. Holcomb is the son of Dr. and Mrs. T. L. Holcomb, the father being executive secretary-treasurer of the Southern Baptist Sunday School Board.

Group Gives Banquet for A.R. Williams

A. Rea Williams, member of the law firm of Littlepage, Littlepage & Williams, and former counsellor of Calvary Methodist Church's young people, was recently honored with a testimonial banquet by that youth group. Mr. Williams resigned as counselor last September.

Miss Jacqueline Waldron, president of the youth group, presented a testimonial booklet to Williams. The Rev. Orris G. Robinson, Calvary pastor, paid tribute to Williams, as did Stanley Wolfe, present counsellor, and Miss Bess Miles, Calvary's director of Christian education.

Youth Month at Ninth Street Christian Church will be climaxed tomorrow at 7:45 p. m. with a pageant entitled "Days to Come," directed by Mrs. Claire Colsten.

The cast will include Dorothy Johnson, Wayne Roberts, Chester Dillard, Arthur Syverson and Leroy Owens. The Rev. Dr. Carroll C. Roberts will preach at 11 a. m. on "Youth and the Living Church—Unshakable Unity."

Dr. Pa: Douglass, president of American University, will address the young people and young adults of Francis Asbury Methodist Church tomorrow at 6:45 p. m. on "The Christian Outlook Beyond World Chaos."

The annual triunion moonlight cruise is set for Monday on the Wilson Line. It will be sponsored by the Methodist Youth Fellowship of the East and West Washington Districts, the District Christian Endeavor Union and the Columbia Federation of Baptist Young Peoples Unions.

New officers of the Trinity Fellowship of Trinity Methodist Church are: Mrs. Maude Spillers, president; Wesley D. Shaffer, vice president; Miss Louise Schdknecht, secretary; Roy Spillers, treasurer; James Cooke, commissioner of worship; Mrs. Mary Cox, commissioner of world friendship; Leslie E. Cox, commissioner of recreation, and Miss Dorothy Wilson, commissioner of community service.

Bishop Curley Announces Pastorate Changes for D. C.

New pastors for St. Stephen's and St. Peter's churches here were among the annual appointments and transfers announced yesterday by the Most Rev. Michael J. Curley, archbishop of Baltimore and Washington. Appointments become effective June 12.

The Rev. E. Jerome Winter, one-time assistant at the Shrine of the Sacred Heart, Sixteenth and Park Road Northwest, and for several years pastor of St. Joseph's Church in Texas, Md., comes to St. Stephen's at Twentieth and Pennsylvania Avenue Northwest. That pulpit has been vacant through the death of the Rev. George B. Harrington on January 7.

The pastorate of St Peter's, vacant since the recent death of Msgr. Eugene Connolly, will be filled by the Rev. Walter J. Hayes, now pastor of St Joseph's Church at Fullerton, Md.

The Rev. John S. Spence, assistant pastor of St. Anthony's Church, Twelfth and Monroe Streets Northeast, will become assistant at the Cathedral of St. Matthew the Apostle here.

The Rev. Edward H. Roach, pastor of Our Lady of Mount Carmel, Thurmont, Md., and one-time assistant at the Cathedral of St. Matthew the Apostle, will assume charge of St. Jerome's Church in Hyattsville.

In other changes involving local and nearby Catholic churches, the Rev. Henry W. Sank, of St. Anthony's, Baltimore, comes to the Shrine of the Blessed Sacrament here as assistant; the newly ordained Rev. John J. Dressel is assigned to St. Anthony's, Brookland, and the Rev. Thomas Delea is transferred from St. Cecilia's, Baltimore, to St. Francis de Sales in Woodridge.

The Rev. Leon K. Warczynski, recently ordained, is assigned to the staff of St. Peter's here, and the Rev. Charles Boehmer, assistant at St. Catherine of Sienna, Baltimore, comes to St. Mary's Church here as assistant.

The Rev. Francis E. Sullivan, assistant at St. Peter's here, has been transferred to Blessed Sacrament Church in Baltimore, and the Rev. Francis J. Linn of the Shrine of the Blessed Sacrament here, will go to the Shrine of the Sacred Heart in Baltimore.

The Rev. Linus E. Robinson, assistant at St. Francis de Sales Church, has been transferred to St. Paul's Church in Ellicott City, Md., while the Rev. Edward J. Fontaine, assistant at St. Paul's, becomes pastor of St. Mary's Church at Lonaconing, Md.

The Rev. Maurice W. Roche, former local resident, who has been serving at St. Jerome's Church in Baltimore since his ordination 17 years ago, has been promoted to the pastorate of St. Agnes' Church, Baltimore.

Church Women To Install Officers

New officers of the Woman's Council of National City Christian Church will be installed Tuesday at 11 a.m. by the Rev. Dr. William H. Pinkerton, minister interim.

They will be Mrs. Cortes G. Randell, president; Mrs. T. T. Williford, first vice president; Mrs. D. R. Knight, second vice president; Mrs. Roscoe Carter, recording secretary; Mrs. Harry Burton, corresponding secretary; Miss Eva Conaway, treasurer, and Mrs. L. M. Herbert, assistant treasurer. Mrs. N. J. Gould Wickey, vice president of the Washington Council of Church Women, will be the main speaker.

Women of India Is Topic

"Mohammedan Women of India" will be the Swami Premananda's topic before the Self-Realization Fellowship tomorrow at 11 a.m. in the chapel at Western Avenue and Forty-ninth Street Northwest.

Schmidt Receives Honorary Degree At Pasadena

J. Raymond Schmidt, general superintendent of the National Civic League, and Washington editor of the National Voice, on Tuesday received an honorary degree of doctor of laws from Pasadena College, California.

Beginning his carer as a militant reformer when a student at Depauw University in Indiana, his native State, he became the youngest assistant State chairman of the National Prohibition Party in the country at the age of 25, chairman of the Prohibition State Committee of Ohio the following year, and then chairman of the Prohibition State Committee of Indiana later. Since 1924 he has been District of Columbia national committeeman of the Prohibition Party.

During World War No. 1, Mr. Schmidt was in the Y.M.C.A. Army service and afterward field secretary of the Intercollegiate Prohibition Association, in which work he visited many colleges and universities and addressed many thousands of college students on the moral and economic soundness of legalized liquor suppression. For a dozen years he was with the International Reform Federation as editor of Twentieth Century Progress and as national lecturer. Among other present interests, he is a member of the order of Rechabites, the District of Columbia Anti-Cigarette Alliance and the United Dry Forces of the District of Columbia.

Mr. Yoki to Preach At Luther Place Church

The Rev. F. Y. Yoki, of New York City, tomorrow at 3 p.m. will conduct services in the Finnish tongue at Luther Place Memorial Church, Fourteenth and N Streets Northwest. Jallou Honkenen will be at the organ console, and A. Raillmo will sing.

Mr. Yoki was born in Finland in 1887, emigrating to this country in 1913, taking charge of a Lutheran congregation in Boston. He also has served in Monessen, Pa.; Hibbing, Minn.; Ashtabula, Ohio, and since 1935, in Brooklyn.

He is a member of the Finnish Relief Committee, president of the Finnish Center Societies of New York City, secretary of the American-Finnish Historical Society and a member of the New York War Bond Sales Committee

Presbyterian Choirs To Sponsor Festival

Three choirs of Georgetown Presbyterian Church, 3115 P Street Northwest, tomorrow at 4:30 p.m. will sponsor a choir festival under the direction of Mrs. William O. Tufts, jr.

The groups will include the church, youth and junior choirs, comprising 75 voices.

Rev. Dale Crowley Ends Year of Daily Broadcasts

Heard nine time every week over Station WWDC, Evangelist Dale Crowley has completed one year of his broadcast known as "Twilight Devotions," a ten-minute, 6:45 p. m. program.

Rev. Crowley

As the only seven-days-a-week broadcaster of the Gospel in the Nation's Capital, the Rev. Mr. Crowley greets his radio audience with the familiar words, "May. I come in now for just ten minutes?" This greeting is immediately followed by his theme, "Don't Forget to Kneel and Pray."

Other broadcasts which are conducted by Evangelist Crowley are "Radio's Original Bible Quiz," Saturday at 8 p. m.; "The Capital Pulpit," Sunday at 10:30 a. m., and "The Bible Round Table," Monday at 7 p.m.

The minister's daily message next week will be on the theme, "Realizing the Sufficiency of God Through Prayer."

Rev. Corrigan to Speak At Loretto College

The Most Rev. Joseph M. Corrigan, rector of Catholic University, will deliver the commencement address at the graduation exercises of Loretto Heights College at Loretto, Colo., Denver suburb, on Wednesday. Paul J. Ketrick, Ph.D., who was a member of the faculty of Catholic University in the English department from 1929 to 1937, is president of Loretto, only four-year women's college in Colorado, Wyoming and New Mexico. Dr. Ketrick, who became the head of the institution in 1938 at the age of 32, was widely known in art circles in Washington as an author and lecturer.

Methodist Student Day Will Aid Loan Fund

More than 40 bishops and college presidents throughout the Nation, former recipients of student loan funds, have joined the 1942 appeal for contributions to the 71st annual Methodist Student Day observance on June 14.

Donations received on that day go to the revolving fund that is used to aid students who otherwise might not be able to continue their higher education. In its 70 years of operation, the student loan fund has provided more than nine million dollars to 60,000 students matriculating in 250 Methodist and accredited non-Methodist schools of learning from coast to coast.

Font to Be Dedicated At Foundry Methodist

A baptismal font will be dedicated tomorrow at 11 a. m. at Foundry Methodist Church with the Rev. Dr. Frederick Brown Harris presiding.

It will be presented by Miss Alida Smith and her brother, Dr. David O. Smith, in memory of their mother, Mrs. Annie Catherine Smith. The rite of baptism will be administered to children.

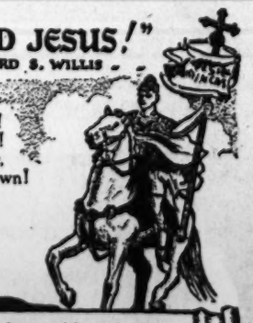
"FAIREST LORD JESUS!"
- - - ARRANGED BY RICHARD S. WILLIS - - -



Fairest Lord Jesus! Ruler of all nature!
O Thou of God and man the Son!
Thee will I cherish, Thee will I Honor,
Thou, my soul's glory, joy and crown!
Little Stories of GREAT HYMNS
This hymn from far Westphalia, was discovered by Richard Storrs Willis. According to tradition it was sung by the Knights of the Crusade of the 12th century, while marching to Jerusalem — hence, it is known as the Crusader's Hymn.

Lowry, jr., professor of systematic divinity at Virginia Theological Seminary, Alexandria, will preach at 11 a.m., and Canon Missioner Charles W. F. Smith at 4 p. m.

Those to be ordained by the Right Rev. James E. Freeman, Bishop of Washington, will be Richard H. Wilmer, Walter F. Hendricks, George William Beale and Raymond A. Davis. Canons Curtis Draper and W. F. Smith will assist in the ceremony.

At 5:30 p. m. the National Cathedral School for Girls will hold its annual Flag Day exercises on the hillside of Beauvoir, the Cathedral elementary school, within the Cathedral grounds, and at an 8 p. m. service tomorrow in the Cathedral Bishop Freeman will deliver the annual baccalaureate sermon before the graduating class of George Washington University.

Weekday services will be held daily at the Cathedral at 7:30 a. m., noon and 4 p. m.

Christian Leadership Held Vital in War

Christian leadership in a world at war "requires just as much courage as any military battle line," Wilbur J. LaRoe, jr., of this city, this week told a meeting of elders and laymen at the General Assembly of the Presbbyterian Church in the United States of America, at Milwaukee, Wis.

LaRoe is chairman of the Washington Federation of Churches' civic affairs committee, is a member of the District Parole Board and an elder of Chevy Chase Presbyterian Church.

"Each elder, by virtue of his position, is at least a colonel in Christ's army," LaRoe declared, "and that fact carries with it the same heavy responsibility for leadership, for courage, for the fighting and risk, which go with the office of colonel in the United States Army."

British Labor Leader To Address Class

Miss Margaret Bondfield, distinguished English labor leader, will address the Current Problems Class at All Souls' Unitarian Church tomorrow at 10 a.m. on "Why English Labor Fights." At the same hour Thomas G. Shearman of the Department of Agriculture legal staff will speak before the Comparative Religion Class on "Some Unfamiliar Facts About the Sayings of Jesus." The Rev. Ulysses G. B. Pierce, D.D., will preach at the 11 a.m. service on "The Opened Life."

Chicago Cleric Named Church Survey Head

The Rev. Albert T. Rasmussen of Chicago, Ill., has accepted a call as director of the new department of surveys and church planning of the Washington Federation of Churches, effective Monday.

That announcement has come from Dr. Worth M. Tippy, acting executive secretary of the federation, whose headquarters are at 1751 N Street Northwest.

Aim of the new department, according to Dr. Tippy, will be to aid Protestant denominations in coordinating their efforts in the field of church planning and expansion, particularly in meeting the demands of the Washington metropolitan area's population influx caused by the war emergency.

The department, through surveys and consultations, will consider the magnitude and character of new residential developments in and near Washington. It will consider what existing churches can serve the area and what new churches are necessary and what denominations should serve a certain area. The department is expected to prevent much overlapping in church expansion.

The department will be controlled by a commission composed of representatives from the Episcopal, Methodist, Baptist, Lutheran, Presbyterian, Congregational, Disciples of Christ, Evangelical and Reformed and United Brethren denominations. Other denominations are invited to participate. The director's salary and other incidentals will be financed through appropriations from the participating denominations.

Mr. Rasmussen is a graduate of Chicago Theological Seminary and has studied church surveys under Prof. Samuel C. Kincheloe, professor of the sociology of religion at Chicago Theological Seminary. Mr. Rasmussen has just completed a study of the field and strategy of Congregationalism in southern California.

First Baptist Pastor Chooses Topic

Basing his sermon on facts garnered at the Northern and Southern Baptist conventions he recently attended, the Rev. Dr. Edward H. Pruden, pastor of First Baptist Church, will preach tomorrow at 9:45 and at 11 a. m. on "The Church Faces Tomorrow." The Rev. Harlan Stenger of Rochester, N. Y., will speak at 8 p. m.

Memorial Rites Scheduled For Tomorrow

Many special programs in churches tomorrow will mark the spiritual observance of Memorial Day, the formal celebration of which is today.

Scores of churches will pay tribute to their "boys" in the service, to men of other wars and to the mothers and fathers of service men.

At Fifteenth Street Christian Church, Fifteenth and Kentucky Avenue Southeast, flags and flowers will beautify the sanctuary. The Rev. Leslie L. Bowers will preach on "Our Unseen Forces." The senior choir will sing.

The Rev. John Gillespie Magee, of the staff of St. John's Episcopal Church here, father of the late R. C. A. F. pilot officer-poet, John Magee, will speak today at 11 a. m. at Memorial Day exercises at La-Guardia Airport, New York. The program will be sponsored by the Churches of God of Greater New York, Inc.

The cleric's son composed the poem, "High Flight," which received high commendation from Poet Archibald MacLeish, Librarian of Congress.

Nurses' Baccalaureate Set for Tomorrow

A special baccalaureate service for the graduate school of nurses of Garfield Hospital will be held in Ascension Church, Twelfth Street and Massachusetts Avenue Northwest, tomorrow at 8 p.m. The nurses will march in the procession with choir and clergy, and the sermon will be delivered by Canon Raymond L. Wolven, rector of the parish. The scripture lesson will be read by Dr. W. Sinclair Bowen, a Washington physician, and special music will be rendered by the choir.

A Call for Unity

THE Washington Federation of Churches, representing twenty-four denominations, provides a common center for information, social action, counsel and spiritual guidance.

In this crowded city the Federation joins hands with social agencies, government departments and links together the churches in their common endeavor to care for this new population—to give them homes, friends, wholesome recreation and provisions for education and religion.

The Washington Federation of Churches is the central Protestant office for the city. It is community-minded and has cooperative relations with other faiths. It has been completely reorganized and greatly strengthened to meet the situation in metropolitan Washington and is now being refinanced.

The Commissioners' proposal to shear the Board of Public Welfare of its administrative powers should not be dismissed as merely a row between two groups of local officials. Probably there is a desire on the part of the Commissioners to extend their power. And the Board of Public Welfare is naturally reluctant to yield any authority it now has. But these are minor considerations. The important question is whether the change sought in the bill sent to Congress would work to the advantage of the community. We think that it will.

Some members of the board have worked hard to see that the funds appropriated for public welfare in the District were well spent. But the present cumbersome system puts a premium on inefficiency. Administrative officers, for example, are nominated by the board and appointed by the Commissioners. When the two are at loggerheads, there is delay and confusion. It should be realized, too, that the management of our public welfare system is a large and complicated undertaking. The lives of approximately 5000 persons are under direct supervision of the board. It controls all the District's penal institutions, the Home for the Aged and Infirm, the Children's Receiving Home and a great variety of welfare activities. Questions of policy must be decided promptly to keep such a large establishment functioning smoothly. It is unfair to both the director of public welfare and to wards of the District to leave such decisions to an unpaid board meeting regularly only once a month.

The board would properly be retained as an advisory body. Actually that change should strengthen and not weaken its position. For its authority at present is sharply limited. It has no control over the welfare budget and only partial control over its personnel. Yet it is sufficiently responsible for the welfare system that it does not feel free to criticize the disgraceful conditions that have developed in some local institutions. The proposed legislation would thus free the hand of the board. Through its power of making investigations and reports and of recommending general policies, it could wield a powerful influence for improvement of the entire welfare set-up.

Nor can the general importance of this centralizing move be overlooked. Nothing has been done to date to consolidate the jumble of loosely related District agencies which, according to the experts, give Washington a confused, illogical and inefficient local government. This measure is a first step toward the desired centralization of local powers in the hands of a single administrative body. If it succeeds, it may well open the door to further improvement of the hodgepodge political machinery serving the District.

Man With The Hoe

One of the saddest things about the poetry of this modern age is the steadily widening separation of poet and people. All over the world, but particularly here in America, the poet tends to write for a smaller and smaller audience. This is what makes the current exhibition at the Library of Congress of the work of the late Edwin Markham of such immense interest. Markham was one of the great exceptions. He was the one American poet of his generation who managed to reach and to move profoundly the great masses of his countrymen.

By a curious irony he succeeded where the self-conscious poet of democracy, Walt Whitman, failed. Whitman's first admirer was Emerson, and even today his "yawps" have more appeal to intellectuals and aesthetes than to the ordinary men and women of "these States." Yet he considered himself the avatar of the American people—still another case, perhaps, of the prophet being without honor among his own.

The poem in which Edwin Markham gave expression to the dark unarticulated mood of the masses was, of course, "The Man With the Hoe." This foreshadowed with uncanny prescience the fearful revenge which the mass-man might one day take for centuries of oppression and exploitation. Markham's work, which has become so much better known than the painting of Jean-Francois Millet which inspired it, gives every similitude of having been written in a white heat of indignation. Actually, as the original MS. and the "fair copy" later inscribed to Mrs. Ernest Hamilton (both included in the exhibition) testify, it was the product of almost infinite revision and reworking. Thus, in addition to many other valuable lessons, the Markham exhibit affords a fascinating study in the interdependence of "inspiration" and "art."

Freezing Jobs

The War Man Power Commission has taken the first step in the direction of drafting labor for war work by announcing that the Employment Service is in the future to be the sole hiring agency "for critical skills in critical areas." The immediate purpose of this move is to prevent employers from bidding against one another for labor. That is the so-called "pirating" of labor. Ultimately the commission aims at comprehensive control over the placement of workers in war industries.

It has long been apparent that under the pressure of growing labor shortages checks would eventually have to be imposed upon the free movement of labor and upon employer "pirating" and hoarding of skilled labor. Voluntary cooperation of employers and labor unions will be relied upon initially to give effect to the job-freezing plan. But the program is a long step toward compulsory drafting of labor. Such a step almost certainly will be taken. Indeed, in a recent address Chairman McNutt of the Man Power Commission warned employers that the Government intended to put a stop to hiring practices which stand in the way of maximum production of arms. He added that compulsion would be employed whenever necessary to achieve results.

Any program compelling a man to remain on a particular job and forbidding an employer to entice a worker away from a competitor by offers of higher wages at once raises the closely related question of wage policy. If jobs are to be "frozen," if labor coming on the market is to be directed into industries where workers are most needed, regardless of individual preferences, it will become necessary for the Administration to formulate plans for strict control over wages as well as jobs. For job control and wage control necessarily go hand in hand. Specifically, that means that the War Labor Board or some other agency must insist upon stabilization of wages and removal of inequalities in rates of pay for war workers of comparable skills. Unless that is done, the man who is compelled to remain on a war job paying less than he could obtain elsewhere is certain to become resentful and demoralized, and with good reason.

Chairman Davis of the War Labor Board stated in a recent address that the "wage stabilization part of the cost of living program was left to collective bargaining." "It was left," he explained, "not to regimentation, but the democratic self-discipline." Such was undoubtedly the original intention of the Administration. However, conditions have radically changed since that policy was formulated. Wages have not been stabilized by collective bargaining, because many employers engaged in war work have been willing to pay greatly increased rates to assure maintenance of their labor forces.

Consequently Mr. Davis himself has recognized the need for remedial action by suggesting that a "directive order" may be necessary to broaden Government control over wages. If that were done, employers and employes would no longer be free to bargain collectively about rates of pay. Instead, wages would be subject to determination by means of a Government-imposed formula. That is as it should be. For it is clearly impossible for the Government to mobilize labor for maximum war production without concurrently defining the wage policy applicable to such controlled labor.

Official "Leaks"

The Government's plan for freezing retail inventories appears to be still in process of formulation. Yet there has been the customary flood of alarming rumors about what is going to be done—the usual misunderstanding based on official "leaks" and partial information. This seems to be a typical case of official bungling, the less excusable in view of the mishandling of the publicity about the gas and rubber rationing programs. In both those cases one clear statement should have been issued by the Office of Facts and Figures reflecting the composite views of those in authority and setting forth a definitive program of action.

Such a statement would no doubt have convinced the public of the necessity for action and resulted in its full cooperation in plans for conserving tires and gas. In planning for inventory control, every effort should likewise have been made to avoid publicity until the details of the plan had been agreed upon. In that event, it would not have been necessary for Donald Nelson, head of WPB, to caution retailers against panic efforts to anticipate inventory regulations not yet in final form, and not due to become effective for several months.

The fact that a provisional draft of the inventory regulation came into the hands of newspapers by way of trade channels suggests that blame for the news leakage is not due entirely to official indiscretions. Of course, it is essential for the WPB to consult with and seek advice from those who are going to be affected by its rulings. That involves preliminary discussion with businessmen of all sorts of proposals that may prove impracticable. Not only Government officials, therefore, but all private citizens called into consultation should consider the information in their possession confidential until such time as the Government is ready to issue a statement that it is prepared to stand by and put into effect.

Bridges Case

There is no blinking the fact that the Attorney General's ruling on the Bridges case comes at an embarrassing moment. Less than two weeks ago the President commuted the sentence of the Communist leader, Earl Browder. In doing so the President said that his action would have "a tendency to promote national unity." Such an argument, of course, was beside the point in a society governed by law. But it is obvious that the deportation order against Mr. Bridges cancels any contribution to national unity which may have flowed from the release of Mr. Browder. Harry Bridges is the West Coast leader of the C. I. O. He is the trusted leader of shipyard workers who are in the very forefront of a battle of transportation which now takes precedence over the battle of production. Doubtless these workers will echo Mr. Bridges' stigmatization of Mr. Biddle's order as outrageous.

That such a reaction may promote a slowdown of work is, however, highly improbable. Certainly there is no encouragement for such a course in Mr. Bridges' example. After exclaiming against the Attorney General's ruling, he wired an assurance to Mr. Nelson that he would continue to do his utmost in behalf of the all-out production program. And what Mr. Bridges has already done in this respect is noteworthy. He has been one of the most active agents on the Pacific Coast in building up the labor-management committees in industry which have done a great deal to aid the production effort. Whatever may be said about Mr. Bridges' past, it is evident that he is wedded to the national cause of smashing the Axis, and that he will allow no personal spleen on the score of the new decision to divert him. That will doubtless be the feeling of the shipyard workers.

Of course, the end of the seemingly endless Bridges case is not marked by this new ruling. An appeal is now to be taken to the courts. It may be that the courts will not sustain the main finding of fact upon which Mr. Biddle acted, namely, that after entering this country Mr. Bridges has been affiliated with the Communist Party. But, if the courts do indorse Mr. Biddle's findings, then they may be given an opportunity of coming to grips with a problem fraught with the utmost significance. This is whether past or present membership in the Communist Party shall ipso facto make an alien liable to deportation as a subversive character. That, as Attorney General Jackson once said, seems to have been the intent of Congress in amending the statute governing aliens in 1940, and Mr. Biddle bases his ruling on such an interpretation. The fact remains, however, that the legislators did not put their intent specifically in writing.

In times past the Supreme Court has shown itself very sensitive to legislative history as an indicator of statutory meanings. But a notable departure from this rule was the recent Supreme Court decision on the Federal antiracketeering law. Here the court held that, in spite of evidence to the contrary, labor unions were outside the scope of this law. A bill is now before Congress to close that loophole—a loophole caused by its own vague terminology. It may be, therefore, that the Supreme Court will likewise balk at Mr. Biddle's interpretation of a law the language of which is inexplicit in that it does not mention the Communist Party.

FLAG RAISING

I wondered as I heard them sing
If Freedom would as truly ring
For them as for the yeomanry
Who made this gift of Liberty.
In answer to my questioned glance
Each gaze was like a leveled lance.

Have you not said our fathers stood
At Concord Bridge and Belleau Wood?
You taught us this—do you not know
Of Valley Forge's dappled snow?
Of Sheridan's ride and Dewey's guns?
Can such as these breed craven sons?
Two armies in that southern dawn
In two contrasting lines were drawn:
The pride of Europe in array
And Jackson's men—mere marksmen they.
As on that field the red coats filed,
How grimly Jackson must have smiled.
"Appease us!" once cried Tripoli—
Old Ironsides' thunder shook the sea.
And newer pirates who forget
We speak that flaming language yet
Or doubt the temper of our blows,
May ask a shade at Doorn who knows
We are the scourge of tyranny.
Fear not for us—we shall be free!

Drum Majorettes

It is hoped that in the Memorial Day parade there will be no prancing, high-kicking drum majorettes such as were witnessed at the service benefit game at Griffith Stadium Saturday. They may be all right on a college athletic field and other places on occasions when the spirit of frivolity prevails, but they are definitely out of place in, and reflect upon the dignity of, a military parade. After Giving Blood

A few days ago, while standing in line in a well-known cafeteria on Connecticut Avenue, I was asked by a young lady if I would mind if two girls in the line behind me moved up ahead of me. When I complied, with some reluctance in my voice—since it seemed that the first young lady might have offered to move back—the second moved up past me, and the third remained where she was.

When our part of the line had wormed its way to the counter I found that the three young ladies were blood donors, and that they had given their blood that morning, and that one of them had fainted an hour or two after a similar operation some weeks before.

I hope the young ladies will read this letter so that they may know I was sorry not to have granted their request more readily. I am sure all the people in the line, including myself, would have been only too glad to say to them: "Move up to the head of the line." But there was no means of knowing.

May I combine my immediate expression of regret to the three young ladies with a suggestion that the authorities responsible for carrying on this splendid public service issue small badges or buttons to blood donors, to be worn by them for, say 24 hours after a blood extraction, so that the public and the members of the Army and Navy and Air Corps may have the opportunity to give these other soldiers of democracy the honor they deserve.

Possibly such buttons are already being given out. If so, I suggest that the donees be urged to wear them, and that sufficient publicity be given these buttons to make them as familiar to the American people as the insignia of the armed services. RECENT REGISTRANT.

Thoughts On Rationing

We are all trying to save rubber, gasoline, and tires in every conceivable way.

I have found that it is possible to do this by noting items of the needs of my household, cataloguing them in order, and then when the selected day comes to do the errands, taking them in their proper order from a list previously prepared, calculating the places nearest to each other which can be attended to at one parking.

When I was given my gas ration card, the man said "You cannot drive for pleasure anymore."

"Am I to understand that I cannot go to church?" I asked.

"Oh, yes! You may go to church," he answered. That set me thinking, and the question came into my mind that we in our hurry to make money, gain fame, advance politically and step out onto the top rung of the ladder, have neglected to instill into the minds of our children, that to worship the Lord God, in public, private, anywhere should constitute the highest degree of happiness known to mankind. But anyway I am glad the "card man," so classed church going.

Let us stop one moment and think, what we were doing when all this need of conservation suddenly fell upon us.

As to speed, the sky was the limit. Life and limb were not considered. We had to get there! Getting there, sometimes meant a life snuffed out, and then we could stop, and some times have plenty of time to reflect behind bars.

Speed has been slowed down! That is well. Jovriding has been so curtailed that it is out for the duration, that is also well. Now, then, let us all use the minds which were given us to use for the good of all, in doing the best we can in all things, thinking of God first.

Congress Appropriates

It looks as though this Administration had gone completely "loco" with respect to fiscal policy. In a single issue of The Post we read that Congress has been asked to pass a bill appropriating 45 billion dollars—an amount greater than one-half of our total 1941 national income—for upkeep of the Army for one year. In the same issue we read that Congress is debating whether to merely double the pay of enlisted men or whether to increase the base pay to $50 a month in one grand burst of generosity, in spite of the fact that our Army is already one of the best paid in the world. We read that Congress is considering a bill appropriating a huge sum to take care of the dependents of service men. We also read that the President is still demanding 280 million dollars for WPA and no less than 27½ million to run the Censorship Office. And again in the same issue we read that the United States is offering to Russia a new lend-lease proposal.

Why doesn't Congress just appropriate our entire national wealth and then go home?

A THRIFTY YANKEE.

A Secretary Looks At War

I am a secretary in what is, probably, the liveliest place in the world today—Washington, D. C.

I am one of the countless number of girls one sees on every corner, in every department store, near every bus line, and in every office in the teeming mass of humanity all working here in the war effort.

I am just another girl from the Middle West who left her family and friends and a life I loved and had grown used to, to come to the greatest Capital in the world today and "do my bit." I have taken on an air of "business" to hide the lonesomeness I feel and a blase manner to cover up the heartaches that seem to be a part of me these days.

But, what does this war mean to me?

It means that a boy I knew who loved the soft beauty of a symphony concert, the feel of good clothes, and the thrill of a football game is flying an airplane somewhere in the Pacific—at least, I hope he still is.

It means that my little sister who finishes college this year and whose life has always been planned for her, who is too young to be anything but "excited" over the war she is living in, is refusing to do anything but join an emergency first aid group and chatters of driving an ambulance and bandaging up broken bodies.

It means that my brother—who should be flying a kite or swimming in a camp somewhere—has taken to haunting the theaters where only war pictures and news are shown and is breaking my mother's heart and keeping her awake night worrying with his talking of "running away to enlist."

It means that when the daily papers come with their tidings of "this sinking" or "that battle" that somewhere in the midst of these tragedies, the lives of the boys I went to school with are being snuffed out.

It means that everything I planned on and dreamed about has been taken away from me as though it had never existed. Sometimes in the evenings when we aren't too tired, my roommate, the girl I live with, and I talk about "our future"—what there is of a future for a girl who has suddenly been separated from all she has been brought up to plan on. We're glad to be able to do what we can—we only wish, really, that we had a little more time of our own so that we could join a Red Cross group and, perhaps, be better prepared to help in the disaster that seems to be lurking around the corner. But we both know that no matter what we may say in our little talks, we girls who work in Washington today, in our hearts we are wondering why it all had to be!

And the memories that are mixed up with it all—things that I keep thinking about that I had thought were forgotten long ago. I find myself sitting at my desk, gazing off into space, oblivious of the work I have to do, and thinking about silly little things that, in ordinary times, would become a part of just growing up. Now, I only wish I could live them over again and the same people could be present.

Walking home from grade school in the first part of fall with the leaves all red on the trees and plans for a wiener roast in the offing, first dances at form school and a date with Jack who has since "been awarded a medal for exceptional bravery on the Island of Luzon and was shot down by an enemy bomber;" college days and fraternity dances and "coking" at the corner drugstore; or riding in a convertible with the top down and my hair blowing in the wind; whirling in a new formal to the rhythm of a big name band at the ever-famous Junior Prom; singing "My Old Kentucky Home" and "Sweetheart of Sigma Chi" by a fireside in our den with rain pouring down outside; crawling up on my grandmother's four-poster and sinking into the featherbed and visualizing the tremendous Christmas tree being trimmed in the west parlor with candles on it; moonlight swims in the country club pool; and plans for a family and children and where they would go to school; and—oh, so many, many memories that today seem like fantasies from a far-away past.

But—we're in the war now and I have to realize that. I have to make myself understand that the horrible stories I used to hear my parents discussing about the "last war" are being relived again with my boys as the participants. And, I'm afraid. Afraid of what the days will be like when it is over. I want to go on a picnic again with the crowd I grew up with I want to hear Sheik singing "Baby, Won't You Please Come Home;" I want to fry steaks over a grill and listen to the fellows hummind "High Above Cayugas' Waters;" I want Sundays in the sunshine when it's warm and on the ski trails when it's cold; I want it to be over.

Sugar In The News

Now that spring, "that sweete season," if anything but sweet this year, is with us, it seems quite fitting that the news should be liberally sprinkled with sugar—and so it is! There is, it would seem, a million-ton sugar shortage in these United States of ours. Therefore, sugar is rationed. Few of us are aware, however, that every time a 16-inch gun is fired, one-fifth of an acre of sugar cane can be considered to have gone into the manufacture of the ethyl alcohol required in the manufacture of necessary amount of gunpowder. Nor is it generally realized that our Axis enemies do not seem to be facing so great a sugar shortage as we are, making this shortage all the more serious for us, yet one that, rightly dealt with, can help us win the war.

It goes without saying that, as a Nation, we are and have long been very fond of sweets, quite to the amazement, even the horror of continental Europeans who, when we were traveling abroad not so long ago, would marvel at our wanting sweet desserts instead of being satisfied, as they were, with an orange or a bit of cheese, particularly at the noonday meal. But what even the possessor of the biggest sweet tooth among us should realize is that we are not being told that it is a case of sugar or gunpowder, but of the former in moderation so that, at a time its manufacture in tremendous quantities is so vital to our defense, we may have the latter in abundance. Perhaps my young niece summed up the situation in a "poem" recently far more aptly than can I in prose. Asked to write something, in school, about the sugar shortage and the proposed rationing of that commodity, she wrote in the true valentine tradition if not in that of the best English metrics, entitling her composition "Sweet Are the Uses of Adversity."

The Russians are red; the Nazis blue.
Sugar is sweet,
But freedom's sweeter!

Which effusion can be said to contain far, far more truth and poetry.

As with most of the good things afforded us for so long, in such generous quantities, in our daily living, we Americans have taken sugar for granted. Few of us have stopped to consider its history, having assumed, no doubt, such a history went back into time immemorial. Actually, such is not the case. Although sugar cane was grown in India, where it seems to have originated many centuries ago, crude sugar was first made from the cane in China about 766 B. C. Sugar cane stalks, which can be kept without spoiling for some time, were carried by early Indian and Chinese navigators on their voyages to the Philippines, Java and other islands of the Pacific. Eventually, the cane reached the Hawaiian Islands, where it began to be extensively cultivated. The Persians also received samples of the cane from their East Indian neighbors, and the Nestorian monks, about 600 A. D., are believed to have been the first people ever to refine and produce a white sugar. With the Arab conquests, sugar cane was carried to the Mediterranean and a thriving sugar industry sprang up in Spain and Egypt and on several islands in Mare Nostrum. The Crusaders in the twelfth and thirteenth centuries, brought back to Europe stories of the delectable sugar they had tasted in the East. Soon Venice began the importation of large quantities of sugar cane and having learned the art of sugar refining from the Arabs, exported refined sugar to all parts of Europe. Next, Spain and Portugal took up the cultivation of sugar cane and, thereafter, because of overproduction, the price of sugar fell and the industry in the Mediterranean declined.

In this country, the best sugar is raised in Louisiana, while in parts of Texas, Florida and South Carolina, the cane is also raised, but more for syrup manufacturing purposes.

In 1750, I was informed by my host on a Louisiana sugar plantation, one very hot, humid afternoon as we sat on the veranda of his picturesque house and looked out over the fields of growing cane, that sugar cane was first brought to the Deep South, specifically to New Orleans. It was sent by some Jesuits in Santo Domingo to brother Jesuits in the Crescent City and, along with the cane, were dispatched a number of Santo Domingo Negroes to cultivate it. The cane was planted in what is now the heart of New Orleans' business district, flourished and was cut and sold in the city market as a confection. It was not until 1794, when the discovery of synthetic indigo in Europe ruined the New Orleans indigo trade, that a young French planter, Etienne De Bore, proposed the raising of sugar cane and the refining of sugar to supplant the indigo-raising industry and save the Creole planters from ruin. De Bore's venture proved a success and, ever since, Louisiana has produced and refined large quantities of sugar each year.

I was also told that sugar cane is a member of the grass family and thrives only in humid countries. It is the leaf of the plant that is most important in the production of the sugar, for the leaf takes up the carbon dioxide from the air and converts this into sugar, which is then carried along to the stalk. The sugar cane plant is in itself a sugar-producing factory, both manufacturing and storing the sugar. One-half of the world's sugar is produced from the sugar cane; the other half from sugar beets, much used in countries of Europe, the latter process having originated in Germany. Beet sugar was long inferior to cane sugar, but has much improved, through more careful manufacture, in the past few years. Except for the extraction of the juice, the beets being sliced and the cane being crushed, the manufacture of both kinds of sugar is very similar.

To help ease our sugar shortage, production will be increased in Louisiana and other of our sugar-growing Southern States as well as in the Caribbean area. Meanwhile there is and will be a shortage of sugar—which is sweet, of course—but in cheerfully cutting down our individual consumption of it, let us remember that "freedom's sweeter."

Today And Tomorrow

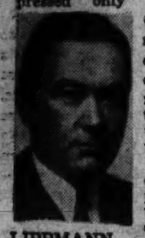
The Submarine Campaign



LIPPMANN

PUBLIC CRITICISM of the Navy Department's conduct of the antisubmarine war can be expressed only by laymen—by Congressmen, newspaper writers and other civilians. Thus it must appear as if the amateurs were criticizing the professionals.

This is, however, only the appearance of things, made necessary by the obvious and proper rule that officers and public officials cannot in time of war argue out their differences in public. There can be no deviation from this rule. But adherence to the rule should not lead the people to think that all criticism of the Navy Department in this highly technical and professional field originates in the uninformed imagination of amateurs, laymen, ignoramuses, and Monday-morning quarterbacks. It just doesn't.

IT WOULD BE infinitely better, of course, if there were no public criticism of so critically important a matter as the conduct of a naval campaign. Now there is a provision in our constitutional system under which, if fully used, the public criticism of commanders in time of war would be dispensed with. It is the provision by which, even in time of war, the service departments operate under civilian chiefs who are also members of the Cabinet. When this system is in the hands of civilians of the stature of the great Secretaries—Root, Taft, Baker, Stimson—there exists a normal, orderly way in which professional criticism within the services can without scandal or public uproar exercise the proper influence. The great Secretaries have been men who were competent, and were recognized by the officers themselves to be competent, to weigh criticism and to judge controversies and to estimate the ability and the quality of commanders.

When this system works, as in the American tradition it is supposed to work, the result is a progressive improvement in the quality of the command. It is accompanied by a progressive improvement in the morale of the service. The War Department is a striking and brilliant example of how the American system can be made to work when the civilian leadership is adequate to the task of reorganizing peace-time routine, overcoming peace-time bureaucracy, and of promoting ability through all the ranks and up to the very top.

IT WOULD BE impossible to contend that this system is now working as it should work in the Navy Department. It would be impossible to contend that the civilians now at the head of the department have shown that they are able to exercise the kind of beneficent authority over the naval hierarchy which is so indispensable if the abler younger officers are to come more quickly to the top, if invention, enterprise, improvisation, and resourcefulness are to be favored against the fixed routine. It is in these circumstances that a very undesirable amount of criticism seeps out of the Navy itself and finds its way into what are made to look like the mere opinions of lay outsiders.

The remedy for this situation ought not to have to be a campaign of congressional and newspaper criticism. But if that is to be avoided, as indeed it should be, then responsible men within the Administration will have to intervene in the situation. The Maritime Commission is profoundly interested: in respect to the submarine it is in the position of a farmer who, finding rats in his corn crib, is told to plant more corn than the rats can eat. The Army is profoundly interested: the plans which General Somervell, as chief of the Army's Service of Supply, is discussing in London depend upon a greater success in protecting ships. The State Department is profoundly interested: for the submarine assault in the Caribbean and on the South American trade routes has very serious consequences for our Latin-American allies and friends.

THE SUBMARINE PROBLEM is, therefore, not only the problem of the Navy Department, and pressure for a better organization and for a more aggressive command can come effectively and properly from within the Administration. That pressure, as the informed know quite well, is urgently necessary. The only alternative to it is outside pressure which would have to begin with a demand for a full disclosure of all the sinkings, and of the extent to which usable patrol and rescue ships have been taken over and when they have been put into service, and of many similar questions.

If the censorship, which Time magazine correctly describes as "thick as a Grand Banks fog" is to remain, then high responsible officials of Cabinet rank or its equivalent will have to overcome their natural reluctance to act beyond their departmental jurisdiction.

THE MATTER has gone beyond the point where the usual assurances can be accepted that everything possible is under existing circumstances being done. There are men of undeniable professional competence, and with intimate knowledge of the actual facts, who are even more gravely dissatisfied than are the ordinary people along the coast who have seen the ghastly and humiliating things which are taking place.

These professionals, who cannot speak out in public and have no proper access to the responsible civilian heads, are insistent that the antisubmarine campaign is not adequately conceived, not properly planned, not efficiently organized, and not under aggressive and inspiring leadership.

THEY KNOW quite well that there are not many standard combatant vessels available to make the narrow Florida Channel, the Yucatan Channel, the Windward and the Mona passages a deathtrap for enemy submarines rather than a deathtrap for our merchant vessels. But they insist that it is in such narrow waters, and especially when the seas are calm in summer, that all manner of small craft can be used, as they are used off the coasts of England, to make life miserable for the submarines.

They do not think that anything like the craft available have been mobilized, or put into service, or efficiently organized for plugging these gaping holes in our continental defenses.

IN CONSIDERING these criticisms we must always bear clearly in mind that this antisubmarine campaign is something quite distinct and different from the operations of the regular Navy in the Pacific and in the North Atlantic. The truth of the matter is that the Navy was never designed with the idea that it would be called upon to fight this kind of campaign in the Atlantic Ocean. Our Navy was prepared primarily to fight the Japanese navy in the Pacific. It has been no part of our naval tradition, as it has been no part of our political tradition, to take seriously the idea that the trade routes of the Western Hemisphere could be seriously threatened.

Now that they are threatened so seriously, a sufficient number of the proper escort ships are not yet built, and no thoroughly prepared strategical plan for this campaign appears to have been ready when war broke out. Therefore, it is necessary to improvise. Because it is necessary to improvise, it is necessary to place in command of the whole operation younger officers who are not set in their ways, who are not tired, who have nothing else to do but fight submarines, who will seek out men who know what has been done in British waters, who by the spirit which they possess will energize and inspire the whole campaign.

THEY WILL have to use frail craft that were not meant for war. But material is by no means the whole of war, and they can take heart from what Napoleon, if I remember rightly, once said—that an army of sheep commanded by a lion will defeat an army of lions commanded by a sheep.

Canadian Farmers

By Janet R. Keith

Miracle Producers

CANADA'S 750,000 farmers have performed production miracles since the outbreak of war. Every year the government has asked for tremendous quantities of foodstuffs to meet the demands of Britain and the home market. Every year the government has got what it asked for. Canada is now shipping more bacon and pork in a single week than she did in the whole of World War I. Canadian farmers have done this big job cheerfully, but they have had at least three major grievances: the price ceiling, the farm labor situation and the price of wheat.

Farmers claim that when the price ceiling went into effect last fall the prices of many farm products were abnormally low. The ceiling prevents these prices from returning to normal and makes impossible the reestablishment of parity prices. (Parity prices are reckoned by Canadian farmers on the basis of the 1926-29 period.)

It is quite true the price ceiling has stopped the upward swing of agricultural prices, which had been rising steadily since the outbreak of war. While it has at the same time stabilized the prices which the farmer pays for machinery and equipment, it has probably done his income more harm than good.

IN ADMINISTERING the ceiling on agricultural prices the Wartime Prices and Trade Board has three possible courses of action. If the ceiling price is abnormally low, the board can leave it in effect and allow the product to disappear from the market. This step would be taken reluctantly, because most food products are regarded as essential, and it is the business of the board to see that supplies of essential goods are maintained.

Second, the board can leave the retail price ceiling in operation, but permit certain moderate increases in price when the product passes from producer to dealer. In some cases the board may reduce the cost of processing, so that there is a rise in primary price paid to the producer without any rise in the price paid by the consumer.

Third, the board may pay a subsidy to the producer. This can be granted only when a low ceiling price threatens to shut off supply. The price of a particular product might be extremely low, but as long as supply was adequate the board could not subsidize. If the low price is causing real hardship to a certain group of farmers, it is the responsibility of other government departments to remedy the situation.

Fruits and vegetables have been exempt from the ceiling from the start. If the price had been frozen, farmers would have made no attempt to store them. The market would have been flooded in the fall, with a consequent danger of shortage later on. Livestock and dairy products are partially exempt from the ceiling. The price on the primary sale from producer to dealer is not frozen, but the retail price to the consumer is. The price of a steer is not frozen; the price of a steak is.

In spite of this partial exemption, the ceiling on meats is causing a great deal of trouble at present. Livestock dealers, who can get a better price in the United States than they can on the frozen Canadian market, are exporting as much as they possibly can. The result is a threatened meat shortage in Canada. It is said that price boss Donald Gordon favors an embargo on all meat shipped to the United States. The farmers, backed by the minister of agriculture, object strenuously. If American prices continue to be higher than Canadian, it looks as though Canada will either have to pay subsidies to meat producers or celebrate Friday every day. This is one price control battle which farmers seem to be winning.

DAIRY PRODUCTS have been subsidized extensively. The government has paid subsidies on milk, butter and cheese; and is now offering a bonus of 3 cents a dozen on grade A eggs for export. Farmers are right in contending that the ceiling has halted the rise in farm prices. But agriculture is certainly no worse off now than it was before the ceiling went into effect.

Labor shortage has been a real problem. Thousands of men have left farms to go into industries and the armed forces, and since June, 1940, farm labor has been drafted into the army. The situation had become so acute that this spring the government was forced to step in. Under the terms of the new selective service act no farmer, farmer's son or farm laborer employed in essential agriculture as of March, 1942, is liable for compulsory military service.

In fact, it isn't easy now for a farm worker to leave agriculture. He may volunteer for service in the armed forces if he wishes. He may leave the farm to work in seasonal occupations like lumbering and trapping. But if he wants to switch to any other kind of work he must get special permission from selective service officials.

Another bright spot in the labor situation is the new agreement whereby Canadian and American farm crews and machinery will be allowed to move freely back and forth across the border. In spite of these regulations, farmers will still be short of help. Women are being organized into land armies, and students of all colleges and universities are being urged to do farm work during the summer. On western prairies lighted tractors are working far into the night. Regions which paid general farm workers $30 a month last year are now paying $55.

Despite the fact that Canada will have a surplus of 400 million bushels of wheat this July, farmers have been agitating for several years for a rise in the pegged price. This spring they got it. Because there is a large area in western Canada which can grow nothing but wheat, the government raised the fixed initial price from 70 cents to 90 cents a bushel. The government must pay this in the form of a bonus to wheat growers, because the price of finished wheat products can't be permitted to rise. At the same time the government will pay bonuses for wheat acreage reduction and for land converted from wheat to coarse grains. (Under the terms of a new agreement, Canada will concentrate on producing coarse grains while the United States will concentrate on edible oil crops).

Changes made by the government in recent months have done much to improve the farmer's position. It is probable that other changes will be necessary to put agriculture on the basis of an essential war industry. Canada is realizing more and more that there's no use pouring men and money into other war enterprises and leaving agriculture to produce millions of tons of food by whatever ingenious methods it can devise. Food production ranks with military training and munitions output as a primary phase of any nation's war effort, and it's got to be treated as such.

Provincial Vienna

By Maurice Feldman

Capital Of The Opposition

MOST PEOPLE connect the name "Vienna" with two epochs. First, Vienna, the city of gayety and song, of the classic Austrian theater, the world famous opera, the center of culture for Central Europe. The other epoch: Vienna after the World War I, after 1918. Speaking of Vienna they called it the Hydrocephalus. It had been the commercial and the administrative center for the whole monarchy before the defeat, and now there was an army of officials and employes left destitute and without work, without hopes for the future.

Yet, into the darkness fell some rays of light. New leaders had come, elected by the people, men for whom the administration of the city meant service to the inhabitants. Old Vienna in its gayety arose and a new Vienna associated itself with it. Modern houses, baths, recreation camps, schools, hospitals, playgrounds for children, kindergarten, were created in a measure and a number that amazed even the richest countries in the world. Vienna, the center of a democratic republic, became the focus of the world. It became the city of modern social reforms, of modern education of the people, and of protection for children. From the United States, from Great Britain, Sweden, India, from everywhere, scientists and mayors of towns flocked in to study the wonders republican Vienna had worked. Such was the second epoch of the Austrian capital.

TODAY, Vienna is no longer a capital, Austria, a name that must not be used, is officially called "Ostmark." Vienna has become one of the many provincial towns of Germany. The spirit, however, their being "Viennese" in every sense of the expression, has remained unchanged, a former official of the Viennese Board of Education, who is at present in a neutral country (he left Vienna only two months ago), reports. At the moment, Vienna is the meeting place of the rebels against nazlism. Vienna has begun its third epoch. Now it is known under the name of the "Capital of the Opposition."

At the beginning of 1942 the following acts of sabotage occurred in Vienna within two days: The big and well-known plant, Brevillier and Urban, in the Viennese district of Floridsdorf burned down. This plant was an automobile repair shop and several hundreds (some spoke of thousands) of automobiles were said to have been destroyed by this big fire. In a petroleum refinery in Leopoldau the gas tanks were bored so that gasoline ran out. These gas tanks in Leopoldau are among the biggest in Vienna. A military camp in Deutsch-Wagram burned completely down.

Eighteen Viennese workers were executed for these acts of sabotage. A great number of Czechs, living in Vienna, some speak of 150, were executed in the months of November and December, 1941. It is noteworthy that the Viennese newspapers are not permitted to report on the executions of the workers and Czechs. The Nazis obviously think that it would make a bad effect on the Austrians and probably the Germans if they learned that mass executions are the only means by which the Nazis can maintain control over Austria. The Austrian Nazis are thinking first of all what they are told at the meetings of the Nazi party officials (Appelle der Amtswalter). At least they are acting as if they believed these things.

THERE IS no doubt that the Nazis miscalculated the outcome of the Russian war. They thought that within a maximum of 60 or 90 days their Reichswehr would have captured Moscow and Leningrad. They were sure to be at the oilfields of the Caucasus and on the Ural within this time. Naive people had even more fantastic illusions about the speed of the Russian campaign. A tailor who was living on the other side of the narrow street where my informant used to live leaned out of the window and shouted to the people on the street: "In two days we'll be in Moscow." This happened in Vienna on July 13, 1941.

Although people are forgetting what they have thought and hoped and although the German propaganda attempts to make them forget, there is much disappointment with the course of the Russian war. The announcement of the winter retreat in Russia would have had catastrophical consequences if it had not been balanced by the announcement of Japan's entry into the war. This coincidence was perhaps well timed by the Nazis. Despite the propaganda even the Nazis feel that things may ultimately go wrong in this war as in the last. The entry of the United States into the war has made the most enthusiastic Nazi doubtful about a final German victory. Officially the slogan was peddled that Hitler would in any case finish Great Britain by renewed mass air attacks and use of poison gas.

It is very difficult to analyze the complex of the general sentiment in Austria because it varies so much. About 25 per cent of the Austrian population are Nazis. They made such fat profits from the economic shifts following the occupation of Austria that they will stand by the German Nazis to the bitter end. On the other hand, it is fair to say that there is not a single Nazi among the workers. There is not one worker who would voluntarily take any risk for the Nazis.

THE SMALL businessmen and professional men are disgusted with the Nazi regime and their discontent expressed in different ways ranging from simple chiding to furious curses. Some middle-class people, however, try to play both hands. They are very much afraid of future air attacks on Vienna and other Austrian cities. But there are many people, especially in Vienna, who hope that the Allies will be able to bomb Vienna and all industrial towns in Austria. All people in Vienna agree that the Viennese population could not withstand such treatment from the air as London had to take. They think that Berlin would not stand a continued air bombardment either.

The Nazi ban on foreign broadcasts is a complete failure in Austria. Everybody listens to foreign broadcasts and those who have no radios get steady reports from others. There are two jokes about listening to foreign broadcasts which indicate the Viennese mood. They are, of course, told in Viennese slang:

One of the famous Heurigenhouses in "Grinzing" is crowded. Somebody tells the owner: "Your business seems to be picking up."

"Oh, not at all," the owner answers. "Look at all those people. They don't stay for long. Fifteen minutes after 9 o'clock the get nervous and begin looking at their watches. At half past nine they start going because at 10 p. m. everybody wants to be home to listen to London and Moscow."

HERE IS another joke, circulating in Vienna:

A maid looks for a job. The lady asks her how much her salary is. The maid answers: "Sixty marks a month—40 as salary—10 marks for being silent about your listening to foreign broadcasts and 10 marks for being silent about your buying in the black market."

The lady answers indignantly: "No, in our house we listen only to German stations and buy only rationed quantities of food. . ."

"Thank you," says the maid. "I do not want to have this position. I don't like to live with people who are starving and become stupid."

Today Vienna gives the impression of a sleeping town. There is practically no traffic at all, the stores are empty. Food stores have signs in their windows: "Merchandise exhibited in this window cannot be sold." If the storekeeper is a Nazi, he puts into the window: "Already sold," "which is, of course, not true. Many storekeepers who have some valuable stocks of furs or rugs, hid them carefully because they are afraid of inflation. Nobody is allowed to close the store. Theaters and movies are crowded. The tickets are bought by the Nazi organization, "Kraft durch Freude," the theaters and movie-houses are controlled and to a great part also owned by the Nazi government.

Persecution of the Catholic clergy began already in May, 1939, in Austria. Hundreds of priests were denounced and summoned or taken to the Gestapo and submitted to interrogations, which were accompanied by the usual insults and torture. The prohibitions of sermons and pilgrimages was not the sole act of interference by the Gestapo with church affairs. The Gestapo forbade in many districts in Voralberg and Tyrol the Corpus Christi processions. In Lower Austria, Catholic priests were simply arrested on the day after the feast day. All this proves that the Nazis are not merely proceeding with this brutality against certain persons whom they might consider as being hostile to their regime, but that their aim is simply to exterminate Catholicism, especially the Austrian Catholic clergy, and to destroy the spirit of religion itself.

Greeks Flee To Turkey

By Edward Kennedy
Associated Press Staff Writer

Driven By Starvation

Cairo, Egypt, May 29.—Three hundred thousand Greeks, living on the German-occupied Aegean islands of Samos, Mitylene, Chios and Nikaria, are so close to starvation that panic is spreading among them and they are being driven to invade Turkey, a report to Ralph Bain, head of the American Red Cross in the Middle East, disclosed tonight.

The people now are living mainly on herbs which are rapidly drying up under the hot summer sun, according to the report, which came from an American investigator who spent a week in the Smyrna region talking to refugees from the islands.

Ten thousand islanders already have crossed the sea by devious means, eluding Turkish patrols. Half of them are in the Smyrna area, emaciated and yellow-skinned from malnutrition.

(The British radio reported that "Turkey, though short of food itself, has decided to send over 600 tons of food, mostly raisins, dried figs and fish, to the islands. The first shipment will leave on Monday.")

"Unless food is sent to the islands soon," the report said, "a tidal wave of Greeks may break upon the Turkish shores with the probability that the situation will be getting out of hand. Panic is spreading among the islanders as they see only death from starvation before them and they will get across somehow."

Hundreds of persons, the report said, have been lost at sea in the passage to the mainland, and others have been fired on by the Turkish patrols.

One refugee told the investigator a few unscrupulous Greeks were cooperating with the Germans in making money in the black market, buying up at small prices the property which the departing islanders must sell to get passage money.

A large part of the island populations came from the Smyrna region, where they were driven out as the Turks reoccupied it after the last war and while the Turkish government is officially friendly, local feeling is not hospitable.

The burning of Smyrna—which the Turks blamed on the departing Greeks—has not been forgotten.

The four islands are famous in history. Mitylene, then known as Lesbos, was where Sappho wrote her poems. Samos produced the wine which tickled the palates of the ancient Greeks—and their gods. Chios claims Homer as her son.

Clever Little Scheme In Carlsbad

IT SEEMS safe to say that no other community in the United States has yet made as great a sacrifice as Carlsbad, N. Mex., population about 13,000, whose local National Guard unit went to the Philippines as F Battery of the 200th Coast Artillery. The 200th was an antiaircraft regiment and most of the 1600 soldiers were New Mexican young men and boys, and, most of them, workers. The Guard was called up in the first mobilization and soon went to the far outpost in the Orient which all military men but MacArthur, and he only with reservations that never were met, regarded as a point of inevitable but worthwhile military sacrifice in the event of war with Japan.

PEGLER

Of the 100 or so Carlsbad soldiers on Bataan only three or four were reported to have got away to Corregidor to prolong the struggle and their families all are without word as to casualties among them. They were the more lively and patriotic youth of town and their parents and other kin are encountered in any ordinary walk on a Carlsbad street and in any local gathering. The war struck Carlsbad not merely with premonitory anxiety and dread and the wrench of parting but quickly with the bullet and bomb and God only knows when, if ever, any of the boys so suddenly absent from their homes in the fascinating vastness of the Southwest will be seen again.

Now it has been said many times that once American soldiers came to grips with the enemy, all squabbles for advantage at home would be forgotten but, in Carlsbad there have been within one month two union walkouts at the mines and refinery of the United States Potash Co., producing a little less than half of the local output of potash which is the greatest individual source of the whole world's supply at present available to the United Nations. This is a vital product used mainly as fertilizer in the growing of food but also, largely, in war chemical processes and in recognition of its importance Carlsbad has been designated a defense housing area.

NEVERTHELESS, two unions of the A. F. L., the machinists and potash workers went out for a 10 per cent increase in wages, won their point, signed a contract and then on May 17, again laid off in such numbers that it was necessary to shut down the mine and refinery for five days more. The second stoppage was caused by the refusal of men who went out the first time to work with men who didn't voluntarily join them, another variation of the demand for closed shop which has been rejected and finally waived in the first settlement. Ten 24-hour days were lost and production of X-thousand tons. The enemy might like to know the exact loss as a key to the rate of production.

It may be noted that the word strike has not been used here. The unions say they didn't strike. Instead, a special session of the union membership was called under a rule which forbids members to work during a session, and this session was recessed and continued around the clock from day to day, a device which might be called in President Roosevelt's memorable phrase, "a clever little scheme." Nevertheless those who did not attend the sessions but were unable to work notwithstanding their willingness to carry on, were called "scabs" which is the common term for strike-breakers employed by unioneers. Why these men were called "scabs" when there was no strike for them to break is something that you may wish to puzzle out in the long summer evenings.

WHAT THEN, is the attitude of the free Southwestern people, so noted for their abrupt independence, so many of whose sons and neighbors' sons have disappeared in the first great fight with the Japs under condition that gave them no hope of victory in their particular battle and only a chance of survival?

The public attitude is one of submission or, at worst, sullen resentment and there is no doubting that some of the people whose sons or brothers are away in the Philippines, Japan or elsewhere in the war, have willingly participated in this concerted leisure and see in their conduct no betrayal of their very own fighting men.

For that matter, there were among the local strength of F Battery, perhaps 15 or 20 who, themselves, worked in the potash industry and were union men, thus the contention of the professional unioneer that he is merely preserving their standard of living and their social gains against the day of their return might be said to have their approval, wherever they are, if they still live. As to that they are unable to express themselves under the processes of the clever little scheme of the union session, the great master union, the A. F. L., has been spared a violation of its promise to forego all strikes in war industries and so goes the altruistic struggle to provide a world fit for heroes to return to in the very homes of some of the first fighters on Bataan.

The Gallup Poll

Many Civic Leaders Favor Peace Offer To Finland, but Oppose It for Italy

By George Gallup
By American Institute of Public Opinion.

Princeton, N. J., May 29.—With persistent reports that Finland and Italy are both tired of war, a substantial number of American civic and community leaders believe the United Nations should offer peace terms to Finland at this time.

They are strongly opposed, however, to making any peace offer to Italy.

The views of 2000 civic and community leaders, representing a cross-section of this group throughout the country, were sounded on the Italian-Finnish peace problem by the Institute. Their attitude toward Finland is essentially different from their attitude toward the weakest member of the Axis. Many more are willing to make peace with the Finns than with the Italians, and to make a generous peace.

The survey questions and results follow:

"Should the Allies offer peace terms at this time to Finland?"

Yes	43%
No	45
Undecided	12

"Should the Allies offer peace terms at this time to Italy?"

Yes	16%
No	79
Undecided	5

The questioning also revealed that three times as many people would favor a generous peace for Finland as would favor a generous peace for Italy.

Pro-Finnish thought is based chiefly on the argument that Finland was a victim of circumstances, was forced into the war by Russia and had to align with Germany for her own self-protection. Many point out that Finland showed her sense of international honor by paying her war debts, and that her people are "just, fair and peace-loving."

This attitude is summed up by the head of a C. I. O. leather workers' union in Michigan, who told an interviewer:

"It isn't Finland's choosing that she's in this war, and we must remember that she was the only nation to keep up payments on her war debts. But Italy, like Germany, is an aggressor nation and must take her medicine along with the Nazis."

The typical attitude toward the Fascist regime in Italy was found to be one of contempt—the attitude that Il Duce made his bed and now must lie in it. It is clear that the majority desire to see the Fascist regime receive just retribution for joining the Axis, stabbing France in the back and invading Greece. The only argument put up by respondents in favor of a peace offer to Italy is that it might serve to split the Axis.

Those opposed to peace offers to either Finland or Italy declare that such offers at this time might look like an indication of weakness on the part of the United Nations.

As far as Italy is concerned, the majority feel that since that country is dominated by Hitler, an offer of peace to the puppet government of Mussolini would be pointless.

Army Will 'Reclaim' 250,000 Men Rejected For Illiteracy

By Thomas F. Reynolds
Washington Bureau of Chicago Sun

Officials yesterday outlined an emergency education program to "reclaim" for the armed forces approximately 250,000 men rejected in the draft because of illiteracy.

The drain on American man power is growing heavier day by day. Providing background for Man Power Commissioner Paul V. McNutt's modified "work or fight" policy announced Thursday, the United States Chamber of Commerce published figures asserting that a survey has disclosed that 384 out of 700 war contractors had been forced to reduce production because of shortages of skilled labor, adding that by the end of next year American war industry was expected to need an additional 18 million workers, and the armed forces another 4,500,000 men.

Dr. John W. Studebaker, director of the U. S. Office of Education, disclosed illiteracy figures after President Roosevelt characterized as startling the number of men who have been rejected for Army service either because of illiteracy or because their so-called intelligence quotient incapacitated them for military activity.

Studebaker disclosed that of some 433,000 men rejected for service because of illiteracy, some 250,000—enough for more than 15 divisions—otherwise could have qualified physically for service. Recalling that he conferred Wednesday on this subject with Mr. Roosevelt and Maj. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey,

Mr. Roosevelt expressed real concern at his press conference over the figures of rejections for low intelligence quotients. Ability to read and write, he said, is an important factor in rejections, but there are a startling number of men who can read and write whose I. Q. is too low to permit their entry into the armed forces. It is not that they are morons, he continued, but simply men whose wits need sharpening.

It was after that statement that Studebaker disclosed that the program of emergency education was being shaped up. It was pointed out that a bill pending in the House would provide 15 million dollars for education of illiterate men otherwise eligible for Army service, and that this measure might be rushed through to provide the funds for the program.

Studebaker's illiteracy statistics disclosed the following figures: Of 10,100,000 persons over 25 years who have not passed fourth grade education, 4,200,000 are native born whites, 3,100,000 are alien whites, 2,700,000 are Negroes and the remaining 100,000 are members of other races. The greatest number of illiterates is found in New York State, which reports some 1,020,000, followed by Pennsylvania with 696,000 and Texas with 642,000. Iowa, with only 61,000, has the highest literacy rate in the union.

Subs Get 2 More Ships in Atlantic, One in Caribbean

The Navy announced late yesterday that a medium-sized United States merchant ship had been torpedoed in the Caribbean area and survivors landed at a Gulf Coast port.

This was the third ship announced yesterday by the Navy as torpedoed. The others were two medium-sized merchant ships attacked in the Atlantic. Survivors of both these previous ships were landed on the East Coast.

Garden Fete Is Scene of Celebration Of South African 'Union Day'

Minister and Mrs. Close Entertain at Legation; Scores of Capital 'Names' Turn Out for Event

By Patricia Grady

"Your garden's been 'discovered,'" a guest told the South African Minister during the 5:30 to 7:30 party at which he and Mrs. Ralph William Close entertained yesterday in celebration of Union Day.

"How nice," responded the jovial Minister, "because Mrs. Close and I will practically be living in 'discovered territory' all summer. We're going to stay here instead of moving to the Chevy Chase Club as we usually do."

Voted by the guests to be the "coolest spot in Washington," the rose-trellised garden of the Massachusetts Avenue legation was the gathering spot for the dozens of members of diplomatic, naval, official, military and residential society that had been asked in to help the Closes celebrate their Union's birthday. The Minister and Mrs. Close kept their places in the drawing room to greet the incoming guests and to bid the departing guests a gracious farewell, until the 7:30 official closing time had been reached. Then they headed gardenwards to mingle with the many guests who found the party too pleasant to leave.

Mrs. Close, like several of her feminine guests, wore a floor-length garden frock for the occasion. The simply-cut dress of sky-blue lace, she set off with black elbow-length gloves and a wide black straw hat trimmed in perky pastel flowers. Among the early arrivals were the British Ambassador and Lady Halifax who came from the embassy across the street to the party. They had with them Lady Clifford, wife of Sir Bede Clifford, the Governor of Trinidad. Sir Bede was formerly the Governor of the Bahamas.

The wide tables set up on two sides of the garden, holding large bowls of champagne punch and iced coffee, platters of sandwiches, and the makings for stronger drinks, held the attention of a large percentage of the gathering. Almost as popular was the rock-rimmed pool into which a cooling stream of water trickled from the rocks above.

Dutch Envoy Looks for His Wife

Mrs. Sumner Welles, wife of the Undersecretary of State, and Mrs. Stanley Reed, a frequent twosome at afternoon fetes, wended their way through the crowd together, "Has anyone seen my wife? We must be home in time to dress for dinner." The Dutch Ambassador pulled out his leather-covered pocket watch, while a group around him scanned the garden for beauteous Mme. Loudon, who was discovered not far away completely surrounded.

"I suppose we really must go on to another party," said Mme. Cervenka regretfully as her husband, the Counselor of the Czecho-Slovakian Legation, and Mme. Hurban, wife of the Czech Minister, bore down on her with meaningful looks.

Explaining just what Union Day was to a group that grew and grew as his dissertation continued, was Ralph Totten, the United States' first Minister to South Africa. According to former Minister Totten, four crown colonies of Great Britain were told some years ago that if they joined forces and became one political entity, they would be given dominion status. So, on a noteworthy May 31 in 1910, the four crown colonies joined together to become the Union of South Africa and to take their place in the autonomous framework of the British dominions.

Celebration Is 'In Advance'

It occurred to some of his listeners that yesterday was not May 31, and therefore, could not really be Union Day. But the situation was straightened out when it was explained that the Minister and Mrs. Close had felt that a Sunday was a bad day for the celebration, and today, of course, being Memorial Day, they decided tht they could just as well salute their Union's natal day 48 hours in advance.

Mrs. William O. Douglas came in with Mrs. Bruce Smith, who was walking along with great ease on an ankle broken several weeks ago at another afternoon party. Paul McNutt played escort to his pretty daughter, Louise, who has just finished her examinations at George Washington University, while Mrs McNutt chatted with a group of friends close by. "Yes, I had a wonderful time during my month in Indiana," she explained in answer to a question, "but when I got back I discovered that my husband had been going back to his office every night to work, so now, I'm here 'for the duration.'"

Mrs. Patrick Hurley made the rounds with her daughter Ruth, and Mrs. Clarence Norton Goodwin reminisced of old times in Lake Forest, Ill., with British artist Ann Harcourt, who has just taken a Georgetown studio to go on with her portrait painting in Washington. The commercial attache of the South African Legation, J. A. Siegruhn, had a group around him in gales of laughter telling them of his experiences meeting the "gangsters" in Chicago the day before, while his wife was kept busy seeing that everyone had a full glass and another sandwich.

Diplomatic Set Well Represented

The Russian Ambassador and Mme. Litvinoff were among the diplomatic set on hand for the party as were the Cuban Ambassador and Senora de Concheso, the Yugoslav Minister and Mme. Fotitch, Mme. Bianchi, wife of the Portuguese Minister, the Canadian Minister and Mrs. Leighton McCarthy and their son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. John McCarthy, and the New Zealand Minister and Mrs. Walter Nash.

Mrs. Joseph E. Davies and Mrs. Millard Tydings chatted together in the doorway as they waited for their car to arrive and Justice Justin Miller arrived late at the party and started a search for his wife. Mrs. James Souby was here, there and everywhere, seeing that the visiting Governor of Tennessee, Gov. Prentice Cooper, met everyone in the gathering.

A few of the many at the fete were Baroness van Boetzelaer, Countess van Rechteren Limpurg, the Commercial Counselor and Mrs. Kleijn Molekamp and the Second Secretary and Mme. H. N. Boon—all of the Dutch Embassy; Dr. and Mrs. Ricardo Alfaro, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Stewart, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Wyatt, Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Bruce, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Livesay, Henry L. Deimel, Mr. and Mrs. Barnet Nover, Mrs. Gilbert Hitchcock, Mrs. William D. O'Connor, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Burke, Mr. and Mrs. Peter Heydon, Field Marshal Sir John Dill, Mme. Palic, Lieut. Col. Alexander Hess and many, many others.

Senator and Mrs. Glass to Give Luncheon

Senator and Mrs. Carter Glass will entertain at luncheon today at The Anchorage tea room in Alexandria, having as their honor guests Miss Mary Louise Elizabeth von Gemmingen and Lucien Wilkins Bruce, whose marriage will take place tonight at Christ Church.

Forty guests will sit down at the long luncheon table, which will be decorated in a bridal motif and will feature flower arrangements of pink rose buds and blue delphinium. The company will include members of the wedding party; the hostess' sister, Mrs. Charles Joubert, and a number of house guests of Mr. and Mrs. Victor von Gemmingen, parents of the bride. Mr. and Mrs. James Garnett Bruce, parents of the bridegroom, will also be present.

Following the luncheon members of the bridal party will go directly to Christ Church for the wedding rehearsal. The ceremony will take place at 9 p. m. this evening, and later, there will be a reception at Gadsby's Tavern.

Harlan Wood Honors Jan Peerce At Early Breakfast

Undoubtedly the first social event on today's calendar will be an 8 o'clock breakfast, when Harlan Wood will entertain in honor of Jan Peerce, the Metropolitan Opera tenor who will sing "The Star-Spangled Banner," and "There Is No Death" at the Memorial Day services at the Arlington Amphitheater this afternoon. Also honored at the breakfast will be Morris King, noted violinist who will play at the services, and Geoffrey O'Hara, author of "There Is No Death."

Others among the more than 50 guests will include Senator E. D. Smith, Gen. Frank T. Hines, Judge Fred Vinson, Alexander Holtzoff, Maj. Gen. Amos A. Fries, Maj. Gen. James A. Drain, Justice James Morris, Dr. Frederick Brown Harris, Arthur Sundlun, William J. Mileham, Adolph Kingoff, George Whiteside, Dr. J. J. Kosninsky, Watson B. Miller and James G. Yaden.

Informal Fete for Count and Countess

Count Jean Pierre de Chambrun and Countess de Chambrun, who are the house guests of Mrs. Edith Randon, were honored during the cocktail hours yesterday afternoon by Mrs. Randon in her home on Albemarle Street.

Thursday night, Mrs. Randon had been hostess at a dinner in honor of her house guests who are en route to Long Island for the summer, after spending the winter season at Palm Beach. They will remain in Washington until the middle of next week, and expect to return next autumn for an extended stay.

Wennerbergs Feted At Swedish Legation

The Minister of Sweden and Mme. Bostrom entertained last evening at a large dinner in honor of the retiring Swedish Counselor and Mme. Folke Wennerberg.

Although the Wennerbergs will not leave for Chili until July, the party was arranged for last night so that their many friends could attend before going away for the summer. Mr. Wennerberg will be his country's Charge d'Affaires at Santiago.

Fred Jones—Homestead.

—grin honeymooners, Dr. and Mrs. Charles S. White, jr., from a fencetop at the Homestead in Hot Spring, Va. Now free of Axis diplomats, the Homestead is again peopled by a large group of Washingtonians like Dr. and Mrs. White, who returned to Washington yesterday. Later in the day they went to Leesburg, where Dr. White and his bride, the former Miss Rachel Horak, will remain until July 1, when they will go to Baltimore, where Dr. White will begin his internship

Miss Sullivan Entertains for Bride-Elect

The newly opened Shoreham Terrace was the scene last night of another of the prenuptial fetes in honor of Miss Gloria Grosvenor and her fiance Torfinn Oftedal whose marriage will be an event of next Monday. The 8 o'clock dinner was given by Miss Mannevillette Sullivan who will be one of Miss Grosvenor's bridesmaids.

Guests included Mrs. Leonard Muller of Miami, cousin of the bride-elect, Miss Beverly Marshall, Miss Janet Ray, Miss Suzanne Kappler, Miss Martha Colmetz, Charles Effinger Smoot, Lawson Coxe, Lieut. Richard Reynolds and Lieut. (j. g.) Gordon Pierce, United States Navy.

Tomorrow morning Miss Frances Boone is entertaining in honor of the couple with a breakfast at the Wardman Park Hotel and in the afternoon Miss Janice Hale and Miss Martha Colmetz will be hostesses at a cocktail party.

Miss Grosvenor, who is the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Gilbert Grosvenor, will give a buffet supper tonight in the garden of her parents' home in Bethesda for members of the bridal party following the wedding rehearsal.

Senora de Munilla Gives Luncheon

Senora de Munilla, wife of Lieut. Col. Felipe Munilla, Military Attache of the Cuban Embassy, entertained yesterday at a small luncheon in her apartment at 2400 Sixteenth Street in honor of Mrs. Paulo Hasslocher and Miss Mimosa Ferraz.

Her guests included Mrs. J. Lopez Larrain, Mrs. Collazo Pittaluga, Mrs. Salvador Cobian, Mrs. Frederico Legorbru and Mrs. Luisa Hermoso.

Stabells Give Teatime Fete

Gayly informal was the garden party given late yesterday afternoon by the Second Secretary of the Norwegian Embassy and Mme. Bredo Stabell. Even though it took place on a day when social and official Washington faced a crowded party schedule, the event drew almost a hundred guests to the Woodway Lane home of the popular couple.

Receiving in the garden, the hostess wore a ground-length navy and dusty rose pink frock. Mr. Stabell greeted guests wherever he happened to be, in keeping with the informal theme of the fete.

Mme. Munthe de Morgenstierne, wife of the Norwegian Ambassador, dropped in after attending the large reception at the South African Legation. Torfinn Oftedal and his fiancee, Miss Gloria Grosvenor, were there; also, the Czecho-Slovak Minister and Mme. Hurban, Mr. and Mme. Kleijn Molekamp, Dr. and Mme. H. R. Van Houten and Dr. and Mme. H. N. Boon of the Netherlands Embassy; the Yugoslav Military Attache, Lieut. Col. Zivojin Radoychich; Lieut. P. H. B. Otway-Smithers and Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Summerscale of the British Embassy.

Still others there included Representative Fadjo Cravens, Maj. and Mme. Karl Wessel, Mr. and Mme. Sven Dahlman and Count and Countess Wachtmeister, of the Swedish Legation; Miss Carolyn Nash, Mr. and Mrs. Charles W. B. Hurd, Jacques Thier of the Belgian Embassy, H. A. Scott of the Canadian Legation, Mr. and Mrs. Leif Holst, Mr. and Mrs. James Cooley, Mrs. Eugene Villaret, and many more.

Quite a center of attention at the party was Dr. Elgin Grosclose, author of the best-sellers, "The Firedrake" and "Ararat." The well-known writer, who turns out books after regular working hours in a Government department, arrived with Mrs. Grosclose, and as soon as the report as to who he was rippled through the crowd, he and his wife were surrounded for the remainder of the afternoon.

Phillips-Bryant Engagement Made Known; Rites Soon

Mr. and Mrs. William Phillips of Boston and Highover, Beverly, Mass., announce the engagement of their daughter, Anne Caroline Phillips, to Lieut. John Winslow Bryant of the 101st Field Artillery Battalion stationed at Camp Edwards, son of Mr. and Mrs. Lincoln Bryant of Milton, Mass.

Miss Phillips attended Madiera School, Virginia, and studied in Rome. She made her debut in Boston during the season of 1939-1940 and is a member of the Vincent Club.

Lieutenant Bryant graduated from Milton Academy and received his degrees from Harvard in the class of 1936 and from the Harvard Law School in 1939. He was admitted to the Massachusetts bar in 1940.

His clubs at Harvard are the D. U. and the Hasty Pudding Institute of 1770, and he is a member of the Harvard Club of Boston.

The wedding will take place in June.

Greek Counselor Host at Dinner

The Greek Counselor and Mme. Philon A. Philon entertained at dinner last evening in their home in Chevy Chase. Covers were laid for 12.

Among the guests were the Minister of Yugoslavia and Mme. Fotitch, the Egyptian Minister and Mme. Hassan and the Greek Minister and Mme. Diamantopoulos.

Mrs. Cordell Hull Out of Hospital

Back at her apartment at the Wardman Park after a tour in the hospital is Mrs. Cordell Hull, wife of the Secretary of State.

Mrs. Hull, who has returned home after an operation, will spend the next few weeks convalescing.

Notes of Society —— Official and Residential

House Speaker Sam Rayburn will go to Muhlenberg, Pa., today to speak at the commencement exercises of Muhlenberg College. Frederick A. Muhlenberg, after whom the college was named, was the first Speaker of the House.

The Postmaster General and Mrs. Frank Walker have as their house guest Mrs. John K. Power of Helena, Mont. She arrived here on Wednesday and will continue her visit for two or three more days.

Mrs. Lister Hill will leave today for Montgomery, Ala. She expects to return to Washington for a brief stay later in the season.

En route to Washington is the new Naval Attache of the Chilean Embassy, Capt. Imanuel Holger and Mme. Holger, who were stationed here a few years ago when Captain Holger was Chilean Attache. Captain Holger will replace Capt. Carlos Cortez here.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Parsons Erwin have issued invitations to a reception on Saturday, June 6, in honor of their daughter, Miss Eileen Erwin. The party will take place at Abremont, the Erwin home, from 5 until 7:30 p. m.

Washington friends of William Jeffries Chewning jr. of Fredericksburg, Va., have received news that he was recently graduated from the Officers Candidate School at Camp Lee, Va., with the commission of Second Lieutenant. He is the son of Mrs. Ann Page Chewning and the late Dr. William Chewning, United States Medical Corps.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles W. Bolick Hurd have cards out for an at home on Sunday, June 7, from 5:30 to 8 o'clock. They live at 4818 Woodway Lane.

Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Reizenstein entertained at a reception last evening in honor of their son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Donald Brown, whose marriage took place recently.

Mr. and Mrs. Marc Goldnamer are spending the weekend in Atlantic City.

Dr., Mrs. Yater Return Home

Recently returned to Washington from an extended trip to Minnesota and California are Dr. and Mrs. Wallace Mason Yater. While in the latter State Dr. Yater was guest speaker at the meeting of the State medical society at Del Monte.

Mrs. Yater is at present in New Haven, Conn., where she will be matron of honor at the marriage today of her brother, Edmund L. Becker, to Miss Mary Clifton Calhoun. The Misses Millicent and Stephanie Yater will be flower girls.

Birth Announced

Capt. and Mrs. Henry H. Barr of Silver Spring announce the birth of a daughter, Mary Josephine, at George Washington Hospital, on May 23. Capt. Barr is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Hugh W. Barr of 4701 Connecticut Avenue.

Luncheon and Dinner Planned For Windsors

Although the Duke and Duchess of Windsor have stipulated that their forthcoming visit to Washington is to be completely off the social record, a few plans for entertaining them are already being made known.

Now in Miami, Fla., the duke and duchess are scheduled to arrive here either late Sunday night or early Monday and will stay at the British Embassy. They will be luncheon guests at the White House on Monday and will dine at the embassy that evening. Lady Halifax will be hostess at the dinner, but the British Ambassador will not be present.

Before Lord Halifax was advised of plans for the Windsors' visit to Washington, he had accepted an invitation to speak at Wesleyan College in Ohio on Monday evening. He will leave for Ohio tomorrow afternoon and return on Tuesday.

The Duke of Windsor, who is coming here to discuss problems of the defense of the Bahamas, will remain at the British Embassy for a few days. On Tuesday, however, the duchess will go to Baltimore to consult her physician and to visit relatives.

Arriving in Washington tomorrow are Mr. and Mrs. Herman Rogers, who are great friends of the Duke and Duchess of Windsor. Mr. and Mrs. Rogers will be guests of Clarence Hewes at his home on Massachusetts Avenue.

Miss Thurman Is Bride of Dale C. Reed

The marriage of Miss Barbara Fitch Thurman to Ensign Dale Calvin Reed, United States Navy, took place last Monday in St. Alban's Church with the Rev. Charles T. Warner, rector of St. Alban's and the Rev. William H. Thomas, chaplain of the United States Naval Academy, officiating.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Harry J. Malony and the late Maj. Allan G. Thurman, and Ensign Reed is the son of Mr. and Mrs. E. Clyde Reed of Batesville, Ind. Brig. Gen. Malony gave his step-daughter in marriage and Ensign H. A. I. Sugg of Annapolis was best man. Ushers included Lieut. Richard Downing, Lieut. Charles H. Hiser, Lieut. H. T. Darracott and Lieut. William B. Kempton.

A reception followed the ceremony at the officer's club of the Army War College. Mrs. Reed attended George Washington University where she was a member of Pi Beta Phi Sorority and the bridegroom attended Purdue University and was graduated from the United States Naval Academy in December.

Dr. Rhee Is Entertained

With his mother, Mrs. Edward Stotesbury acting as his official hostess, James H. R. Cromwell entertained yesterday afternoon at Mrs. Stotesbury's Foxhall home in honor of Dr. Syungman Rhee, chairman of the Korean Mission to the United States, and Mme. Rhee.

Receiving in the library with her son Mrs. Stotesbury was gowned in black lace, fashioned on flowing lines with a long train, and accented with several ropes of pearls. Mrs. Rhee wore native Korean costume of yellow brocade.

From 5:30 on until well after dark, guests dropped in to greet their host and hostess, pause for cocktails in the library, or a cup of tea from Mrs. Stotesbury who officiated later in the conservatory, and to wander through the drawing rooms and onto the terrace with its view of the grassy slopes and the woods beyond.

Highlight of the afternoon was the program of Korean folk songs and chants given by Florence Ahn, who, garbed in colorful native costume, sat on the floor and accompanied herself with the tom-tom rhythm of a native drum.

Senator and Mrs. Harry S. Truman were among the guests as were Senator and Mrs. Guy M. Gillette, Senator Harley M. Kilgore, Representative Francis Case, Representative John D. Dingell, Rev. Frederick Brown Harris, Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Wood Robert, Adela Rogers St. John, Mr. and Mrs. John W. Senator, Mrs. Connally Honored By Mrs. Mesta a Sulgrave Club

Texas was deep in the heart of society last night when Senator and Mrs. Tom Connally of the Lone Star State, were guests of honor at a gala party given by Mrs. George Mesta at the Sulgrave Club.

An air of informality, promoted considerably by the lively music of Sidney's Orchestra and a highly talented man, who read character and foretold the future for many who were present, dinner got under way at 8:30 p. m. A number of additional guests came in after dinner, and the fete went merrily along until midnight.

Spring blossoms decorated the entire second floor of the club. Mrs. Mesta, smartly turned out in a black frock, fashioned on fitted lines, received with Senator and Mrs. Connally at the top of the stairway. Dinner was served at eight tables in the ballroom, where a motif of white blossoms and wedding bells was featured in the decorations.

Senator Connally's fellow members of the Senate seemed to be all over the place. Senator and Mrs. Pat McCarran chatted with Senator Kenneth McKellar. Senator Theodore F. Green moved from one group to another, as did Senator Arthur Capper and Senator George Radcliffe. Also among others from the Senate contingent on hand for the party were Senator and Mrs. Carl Hatch, and Senator and Mrs. Alexander Wiley.

Mrs. William A. Glassford, who will leave soon for Charleston to join Rear Admiral Glassford, was in the company, as were Rear Admiral Arthur J. Hepburn and a number of others from the service set.

Among the guests from out of town were Mr. and Mrs. Carl Jackson (she is Rosa Ponselle) and Mrs. Allen Walter Morton, all of Baltimore and all of whom were popular centers of attention all evening.

Another dinner on last evening's calendar was the one at which Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Snowden Hill entertained in their Georgetown home. The party was one in a series that Mr. and Mrs. Hill have planned for this season.

Gas Shortage Puts Stress On Foot Care

Correct Position In Walking Also Is Important

By Ida Jean Kain

UNLESS you're lucky enough to own a horse, the gas shortage is bound to set you back on your heels. And with your feet and legs back in general service, you will have to give them more considerate treatment.

First of all, look to your shoes. It is the fashion now to wear sensible shoes. The women who are still teetering along on their high heel shoes just look silly. Such shoes are no longer considered high style—or even good taste—for daytime use.

That doesn't mean you have to drop down to flat heels. If you have been wearing extremely high heels for years, the sudden change might be too much for your arches and calf muscles. Military heels would be better for you.

Correct Position

If you are going to have to do a lot of walking—and it looks as though all of us will—you can make it easier for yourself by walking with your feet in the correct position. That is the least tiring. When you are out on the streets, practice walking along on a straight line and put one foot almost directly ahead of the other. Toe straight ahead. Then at home kick off your shoes and walk around with your toes curled under and your weight on the outer borders. That will strengthen your arches.

The heels of your shoes tell what is wrong with your walk. If they are worn down on the inside, you are probably throwing your weight toward the inner border, which is the weakest position. This may be caused by by your inclination to turn your toes out. By making a deliberate ahead you can distribute your effort to point your toes straight weight along the entire length of the longitudinal arch.

Consider Length

Make sure that your shoes and stockings are long enough. With the increased amount of walking you do, you may need to buy your stockings a half size larger.

Contact baths of hot and cold water stimulates the circulation and help to relieve the aches and pains. At night, rest with your feet propped up on pillows. Or, you may find it restful to place a pillow under your knees.

The people who are headed for foot trouble are the overweights. It's not so bad to carry around your normal weight. But when you are lugging along 20 to 50 excess pounds, your feet feel the extra weight. Count calories and get it down. This will be a favor to both your transportation system and your health.

There's a bright side to at least two of our shortages. The curtailment in sugar and transportation will improve the health of the American people.

The regular Saturday Fashion Forum is omitted today as Jane Driscoll, the Fashion Editor, is on vacation. It will be resumed on her return.

Butter Wrapped In Parchment

Wilmington, Del.—More than 75,000,000 pounds of butter will be wrapped in specially impregnated parchment paper during the current year to protect it from losses due to mold, reports the du Pont Food Research Laboratory.

Great quantities of butter are expected to be saved from spoilage as a result, thus helping to conserve stocks.

Mold rarely can be recognized in butter except by an "off" taste, according to food experts. Its growth can be retarded even in warm weather, however, by wrapping the butter in paper treated with a mold inhibitor. The baking industry also is attacking the mold problem in baked goods by incorporating mold retardants in increasing quantities of bread, pies and cakes.

It is estimated that nearly two billion loaves of bread will be protected this year.

Dark Zipperless 'Casual'

Forecaster of the zipperless era to come is this smart version of the coat dress. The side closing is punctuated by pearly disc buttons. Cool koda shan, a nonwilting shantung weave Eastman rayon, makes the fabric. Note the wide shoulder tucks, providing soft fullness in the bodice. A panel of unpressed pleats flares the skirt. It is available in summer darks—deep woodsy green, black and tangerine—the perfect hot-weather dress that will not show soil

War Moving Presents Problems, Using Old Things, a Necessity

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin

WITH the war emergency making moves and changes necessary, the problem of home furnishing becomes a more pressing problem than usual—with scarcities and the need for using old things.

Mrs. T. J. C. writes: "I have just moved into a new house and am starting housekeeping on my own for the first time. In the living room the fireplace is still to be installed and I can't decide between brick or stone. I have a rug with a beige ground and floral stripes in different colors. The only furniture I have bought is a love seat. The walls will be painted. The living room opens off a small reception hall and the dining room has an arch opening into the living room. I'd planned to have the same pattern rug here as in the living room.

Old Oak Dinette

"My husband feels that the stairway opening into the living room should also have the same carpeting. Would this be too much? There i have an old oak dinette set with chair seats that need new covers. Will you advise about wall, draperies and furniture coverings?"

Why not have the walls of all three rooms painted in the beige as the rug ground? Then have beige sheer of this same tone with a jade green taffeta valance, then all your upholstery in beige achieving contrast in the use of different texture such as homespuns, leathers and so on.

Blond Wood Effective

It would even be effective to have the new furniture you buy in blond wood. Accent the room with accessories in jade greens—you could have one or two chairs in jade green leather.

However if you don't think you'd like such a stylized color scheme, have your draperies in flowered cretonne on a beige ground with furniture coverings in shades of dusty rose, beige and green. The carpeting could be the same on stairs and in dining room—or you could have plain beige for stairs and dining room. If you decide on flowered draperies, we'd use plain carpet for the other floors; if you carry out monotone beige scheme, have figured rugs throughout. The brick fireplace will probably be easier to work with.

Budget Beauty

An old-fashioned beauty treatment grandmother could have handed down to you is effective for a lovely skin. Mix oatmeal, mineral honey and milk to a soft consistency, smooth it on your face and relax for 15 minutes. Then wash it off with cold water and your skin will glow.

Take Care of Your Wool Garments

TAKE care of your wool garments, warns the American Wool Council. With the demand for wool for the armed forces, home supplies are bound to be curtailed. Clothing and household woolens must be cherished.

The life of woolens, especially clothing, maybe greatly prolonged, with a little regular, common sense care, the council says. It is the kind of care that eliminates too frequent pressings and cleanings, which in time, weaken the wool fabric.

The daily care of woolen articles, particularly clothes, requires:

The clothes brush with the right bristles.

How To Brush

Brushing means more than a few licks with a whiskbroom to remove lint and other visible deposits. It means the use of a clothes brush which will remove the dust you cannot see as well as the obvious surface. The tiny, almost invisible dust particles can act as an abrasive which, if left in the garment, will shorten its life. The habit of brushing clothes, immediately after wearing will prevent the dirt from working into the fiber.

The kind of clothes brush must be considered if you are to preserve your wool fabric. A brush with stiff bristles that loosens or pulls out the wol fibers will shorten the life of the fabric. Use a brush with soft but firm bristles, and do a thorough brushing job to remove the hidden particles of dirt, and, if a pile weave fabric, to lift the fibers to give that luxurious surface texture.

Hangers For Clothes

Wide shouldered hangers which will allow the garment to hang in natural folds should be used for suits and coats for men and women.

Suit hangers for men should have trouser bars which are large enough in diameter not to put an additional crease in the trousers. The hanger which allows the full weight of the trousers to hang from the cuff is even more satisfactory from the standpoint of retaining a crease.

A skirt hanger that holds the skirt by the band and lets the skirt hang straight, eliminates creases that occur when the skirt is folded and hung over a hanger rod or folded and hung on a trouser hanger.

Give It Air

Woodend or covered hangers for women's and children's dresses should be of sufficient thickness and width to extend across the shoulders from the sleeve seams. Hang the garments carefully.

Before hanging the garment in the closet, give it an airing to help prolong the life of the wool fabric. Immediately after you have taken it off, hang it where there is a free circulation of air. Sweaters and other knitted garments should be placed on the bed or on a chair until all the moisture absorbed from the body has had a chance to evaporate.

On rain days, when clothes are wet and perhaps mud-splashed, hang them in a circulation of air, but away from direct heat. It is a temptation to hasten the drying by placing the garment over a radiator or near a stove or fireplace, but the results are invariably disastrous. The wool fiber becomes brittle and inelastic, means that, instead of responding to the movements of the body, the fiber is strained and wears out quickly. Mud, when dry, is easy to remove with a brush, but any attempt to remove it when wet is likely to work it into the material.

At intervals of a few weeks, winter or summer, all wool garments should be hung outdoors in the sun for a short time for a special airing and brushing. Collars should be turned up, trouser cuffs turned down and pockets turned inside out for a thorough brushing. Dust lodges in the fold between lining and hem in coats, in seams and in the creases of pleats, where moths will gleefully set up housekeeping at the first opportunity.

Trouble? No, just thrifty habits of getting more wear and better appearance out of wool garments of a quality the war may make hard to replace.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Bride Is Disturbed by Husband's Championship Of His Half-Sister's Possessive Attitude Toward Him; She Questions Propriety of Their Devotion

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Just what do you think of a man who lets his family come between him and his wife? Why will families interfere in a marriage? My husband tells me that his family is not to interfere in our marriage, and yet they do. His mother doesn't; but everyone else is meddling. One relative, a half-sister, often telephones him here at home. She seems to have the upperhand of him. He seems to be actually afraid of her.

Once I told him what I thought of her and he lost his temper. Why? Do you suppose there is a deeper feeling than family love between them? I am surprised to know that anything or anybody could upset our happiness. Am I wrong in speaking my mind concerning his half-sister? I have heard of relatives inter-marrying; but in this case the half-sister is married already. I am unhappy because he is devoted to his family and I am the storm-center of tumult. What shall I do?

I am only thinking of his happiness. He has even told me that when I married him, I married his family; and before it is over, I will regret having married him. What is wrong here? I love him and I want to know what to do for his good. My people don't bother us. We have been married less than a year. We met slightly more than a year ago, and were married after a short courtship. Why aren't we allowed a fighting chance to make a success of our marriage? Why can't the silver cord be loosed? Doesn't the success of our marriage depend upon my husband, considering the nature of our problem? I have not attempted to assert my rights; but don't wives have rights, Miss Haworth? My husband is entering the Navy service soon, and I don't want him to leave with memories of unhappiness. Please advise me what to do. RUTH.

Marriage Is Never Paradise for Two

DEAR RUTH: Are you being intellectually honest in stating the problem? Are you sure this is a case of your husband's family trying to "come between" you and him? The definitely (perhaps deliberately) evasive tenor of your complaining questions strongly suggests jealous frustration—which leads to the thought that you may be the balked aggressor in trying to "come between." If you were willing to call a spade a spade, I imagine you would admit that your happiness with your husband is being spoiled by your jealous resentment of his half-sister's familiarly affectionate and possessive attitude toward him.

The fact of their diluted kinship may have touched off your suspicion that "there is a deeper feeling than family love between them." Again, it may be that the half-sister did long enjoy his special esteem, and now finds herself meanly reluctant to relinquish his whole heart to you. Her telephone calls may amount to unsporting efforts to keep a toehold in his thought; or they may be simply a carry-over of years of habit. Maybe she thinks no more of calling him occasionally, to discuss the doings of the day, than she would think of calling her mother for a similar "check-up." It is fairly commonplace for members of closely knit families to "keep in touch" by telephone when married and gone to homes of their own.

Furthermore, it is not uncommon during the first months or years of marriage for a bride—particularly one who married her husband on short acquaintance, or with slight knowledge of his background—to experience nightmarish jealousy of his obstinately loyal devotion to certain members of his family or lifelong friends, of either sex. In such instances, the bride usually is putting herself "through hell" for no reason whatsoever—except that she cannot quickly reconcile herself to the fact that she isn't the be-all and end-all of her husband's existence; cannot maturely digest the discovery that he loved and was loved before he met her, and that many of these old attachments continue to be very precious to him.

It appears you got married under the childish impression that marriage creates an isolated social situation in which two live in paradise, untouched by life's repercussions. And now you are miserable and frightened to learn that the relationship, despite its joy-giving dividends, brings you to grips with reality as never before, and confronts you with endless minor and major difficulties stretching away on every hand, to be coped with or solved. In your querulous rebellion against the challenges of your particular situation, you are blaming your husband for their existence,—when actually, I daresay, he is as surprised and dismayed by their appearance as you. When you take that attitude, you are putting him angrily on the defensive against you, and thus dangerously reducing your chances of threading a safe course over, under, around or through them, in growing companionship with him.

It is unreasonable, even infantile, to contend that the success of your marriage depends upon your husband;—which is to say, upon his breaking off social and sentimental relations with his family (or half-sister). On the contrary, the success of your marriage is up to you. It depends primarily upon your wisdom and resourcefulness; upon your ability to accommodate to things as they are at present, while at the same time steadily and tactfully taking the lead in developing with him a fund of special interests and a new pattern of life that seem, automatically, to exclude any persons you secretly consider offensive.

As to whether "wives have rights,"—I should say that the person in any situation who is initially, obstinately and only concerned with his "rights" is getting the cart before the horse. To recognize one's duty and perform it wholeheartedly, in a spirit of happy privilege, is the surest means of invoking, in one's behalf, the workings of the law of perfect justice. Thus, if you would dissolve the present jealous conflict, and fire your husband with the determination to continuously extend and safeguard your "rights," you must appreciate the privilege of sharing intimately the life of the man you love; and occupy yourself wholly with being in all ways, his loyally loving wife, despite any difficulties put in your way by thoughtless or ill-willed persons. M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Gracie Allen Gives Five Don'ts For Short Girl

Gracie Allen, 5 feet 2, gives you five "dont's" for the short girl:

Don't wear cartwheel hats or you'll look like a mushroom.

Don't try to add too many inches with ridiculously tall hats, towering pompadours; they make you look short by comparison.

Don't wear gowns styled with bulky drapery; the slim sleek lines are for you.

One is the same as Gracie's—don't wear towering hats, tall pompadours.

Don't wear all up and down lines, vertical stripes; look for clothes with a horizontal break such as peplum, tunic, yoke, waist and skirt in contrast.

Club Federation Head Warns Of Defeat Unless Americans Show Better War Spirit

By Genevieve Reynolds

AMERICAN people still are too apathetic toward the war. Throughout the country something is lacking in the spirit of the people. Unless this psychology is changed, there will be no Allied victory. So declared Mrs. John L. Whitehurst, president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, who was the guest speaker at the District federation's annual luncheon yesterday at the Mayflower Hotel.

"It is time to wake up and to realize that we're fighting a losing war," she said. "No sacrifice should be too great for us to make in order to win."

Declaring that women are confused about war services, Mrs. Whitehurst pointed out that too many who have no talent for nursing, driving ambulances or flying planes are rushing into those activities. "There are many things to do besides the glamorous tasks," she warned. "Collectors are needed for scrap iron, paper and other salvage materials. yet women spurn these humble tasks to sign up for courses for which they have absolutely no ability."

Condemned Grumblers

Mrs. Whitehurst condemned women who grumbled about sugar and gasoline rationing. She said that many groups were banding together to protest the rationing as unnecessary.

The federation president also took a potshot at clubwomen who pass resolutions, talk, talk and do nothing about the war. "Too much time is wasted," she asserted, "in passing resolutions, chattering and doing nothing."

Discouraged with the criticisms against labor throughout the country, Mrs. Whitehurst urged clubwomen to cease irritating labor. "In my travels about the country in recent weeks," she said, "I have seen women almost hysterical against labor. If you want production, quit fighting labor."

She suggested that the chief problem was the time-and-a-half pay for overtime. "Let the manufacturer do with less profits now and give the extra pay to labor, but see that it is invested in war bonds," she said.

Tracing the changes in women's attitude in all sections of the United States Mrs. Whitehurst pointed out that she first found a complete isolationistic attitude, then a "it-can't-happen-here" feeling; then, after December 7, hysteria and now, confusion.

Reaffirming her policy for the federation of preservation of our present representative form of government, return to religion, and war services, the speaker urged her listeners to intensify their war efforts.

Mrs. Arthur C. Watkins, president of the District Federation of Women's Clubs, presided and introduced the speaker and honored guests, Mrs. Eugene Meyer and Mrs. Walter E. Kreil, president of Maryland Federation and past presidents of the District Federation.

Vassar Alumni

THE CARE of children and the protection of the family is of vital importance in wartime. In fact, it should be our first concern, according to Dr. Mary Shattuck Fisher, chairman of the Department of Child Study at Vassar College, who spoke before a group of Vassar Alumnae in Washington yesterday.

"War will come closer daily to children with the multiplication of many other problems that concern adults also," she asserted. "There are problems of diet, of keeping well under strain, of preparation for air raids, of sudden and difficult changes in family plans. These changes will bring insecurity to all children in cities, suburbs, villages, farms and to poor and rich alike."

"Now, not tomorrow, is the time to start training for the children's welfare," said Dr. Fisher, who is in charge of Vassar's new Summer Institute for Family and Child Care Services in Wartime. The institute will be held June 22 to August 1, at the college.

In discussing plans for the institute, Dr. Fisher pointed out that it would be Vassar's contribution to the Nation's war effort. Also that the institute would be revamped to meet changed conditions.

'A. E. F. Women Meet

WOMEN WELFARE workers who served overseas with the A. E. F. from 1917 to 1922 as personnel of the National Catholic War Council and the Knights of Columbus, and organized since their return home as the Overseas Division of the National Catholic Welfare Conference, are holding their annual reunion and convention here in Washington, today, tomorrow and Monday.

The highlight of the three-day program for the women who did for the soldiers in World War I what the National Catholic Community Service and other U. S. O. agencies are doing for them in the present conflict, will be the unveiling of a bronze honor roll tablet at 4 p. m. Saturday in the National Catholic Welfare Conference building at 1312 Massachusetts Avenue Northwest.

Seven women residents of Washington have their names inscribed on this bronze tablet in tribute to the service they and 140 other women rendered overseas in the last war. These women are Mrs. Allen McDonald, Mrs. Jerome J. Stenger, Mrs. Charles McIntyre, Miss Rhea Garvey, Miss Julia MacNamara, Mrs. Walter Adams and Miss Agnes Collins.

Miss Theresa Bonney, noted woman foreign correspondent and photographer, now in Washington, also has her name on the tablet as a member of the overseas division.

Following the unveiling the delegates to the reunion will be guests at a reception given in their honor by the Right Rev. Msgr. Michael J. Ready, general secretary of the National Catholic Welfare Conference, peacetime outgrowth of the war council. The reception will be held at the N. C. W. C. building where the bronze tablet is unveiled.

Also on the calendar of Saturday's events for the reunion over which Mrs. Mary Furlong Stormes, national president from New York City will preside, are a luncheon Saturday at 1 p. m., at Old New Orleans Restaurant, and a dinner Saturday at 7 p. m. at L'Escargot.

The sessions of the convention which is being held at the National Catholic School of Social Service, 2400 Nineteenth Street Northwest, will open with a memorial mass in the chapel there on Sunday morning with the Rev. Dr. Lucian L. Lauerman, director of the school, as celebrant of the mass. A Communion breakfast will follow.

A business meeting and election of officers will be held Sunday, following which the delegates will attend a cocktail party in their honor at the home of Maj. and Mrs. Charles McIntyre, 2333 South Nash Avenue, Arlington.

11 District Pen Women Win Prizes in National Contest

ELEVEN members of the District Branch, National League of American Pen Women, won coveted prizes in the national biennial contests just closed.

Mrs. Cora Frear Hawkins, chairman of fiction, won second prize for 30-minute juvenile plays in the radio contest, with her play, "Forefathers American," and honorable mention in the same contest with her radio article, "The Widow's Mite." Honorable mention in the 30-minute juvenile plays went to Mrs. Elizabeth Merz Butterfield, for "Children's Hour."

In the short-story contest, Miss Ann Darlington won first prize for the best unpublished story titled, "The Home Guard." Second honorable mention in the published story contest went to Mrs. Rowena Farrar for "Office Baby" which was published in the Ladies' Home Journal.

In the books of poetry, Miss Anna Priestley's "Upon a Rock," and Mrs. Ida Elaine James' three volumes, "All Gold," were runners-up for the prize. Miss Alethea Todd Alderson tied for second honorable mention with her book, "This Thing Called Peace." Miss Priestley also won honorable mention in the "Mildred Jobson Contest" with her poem, "Proud Exile."

In the Juvenile Contest, Mrs. Marion Everett Hayn's "Desert Antelope Chipmunk" received second prize.

In the Fiction Book Contest, Eloise Liddon (Mrs. G. A. Soper) received first prize for her novel, "Some Lose Their Way." This is the novel which won a silver medal in the "Thomas Jefferson Award" given by E. P. Dutton & Co. last year.

A District artist, Miss Katherine Parker Melton, also won first prize for her portrait in oils called, "Manual of Taxco." This picture has won a number of prizes for the artist.

The pressbook entered by the District branch, also won first prize for cities of 100,000 or over. Mrs. Eva Grant Marshall, publicity chairman for the branch, submitted the book.

Another member of whom the league is justly proud is Miss Martha McLeod, author of "Brother Warriors." Miss McLeod is the first member of the District branch to offer her services, and to be accepted for Foreign Service. She will be administrative assistant to a commanding officer in the Red Cross Social Service.

business of laying out menus 30 days ahead of time was adopted by the Army.

For instance, the long range menus often would call for steaks for dinner and the mess sergeant in barracks or in the field would go down to his quartermaster warehouse and come back with a side or so of beef, which weighed exactly what his meat allowance called for. Obviously this side of beef would not contain enough steaks for 200 men and the cooks and K. P.'s would dine on steaks while the men got stew. This situation caused no little dissatisfaction in an Army which likes its steaks.

Now They Get Them

That is changed now. Beef is boned and cut at the packing houses under quartermaster supervision. Steaks are packed together; so are stew meat and roasts and ground beef, and then quick-frozen. As the menus call for certain cuts of beef these are shipped directly by the packers to quartermaster depots in the field from which mess sergeants now may draw exactly what the menus call for. And the bones are kept here to be converted into fertilizer instead of contributing to the already boundless energy of the dogs which have attached themselves to the Army and its soldiers.

As they go along with their unending efforts to save weight and space and make the United States Army the best fed force of fighting men in the world, the research laboratory experts are solving other pressing matters. For instance, they have developed a palatable and nutritious butter which will not melt under 110 degrees. They have seen dried egg processors increase from 11 to 88 to supply their needs and they now buy from 125 firms which dehydrate vegetables.

SUPPER of field ration "K"

As a result of their efforts here, the United States soldier, despite his protestations to the contrary, eats as well as he could at home. In contrast to his Civil War prototype's regular ration of bacon, hardtack and vinegar, he lives on everything the land can produce, no matter how far from home he may be.

Emergency Rations

Even his emergency ration is designed for taste, nutritional value and filling properties. For the average soldier there is the Army's Ration C, consisting of as much as he can hold, with coffee and dessert, for all three meals. There is the parachute trooper's condensed condensed Ration K, three compact waxed cardboard packages of meat, biscuits, coffee or lemonade, soup and, of all things, chewing gum.

As an emergency ration for fliers who may be forced down in isolated places, the laboratory has devised a filling concoction it calls Ration D, which looks and tastes like chocolate candy but contains all a man could get in calories, minerals and vitamins from a full meal.

And as he eats his meal of dried food or concentrated food, the American fighting man today would be cheered if he could contemplate at the same time the bulky, tin-encased emergency ration of the 1918 soldier, which could be opened only "at the direction of an officer or in extreme emergency." He would not be impelled to drop his own ration for that unappetizing mixture which could be eaten cold, or fried, or:

"Boiled in three pints of water and the resulting soup seasoned to taste."

cused in time to see the parade, the release times varying in accordance with the locations of the offices, it was announced yesterday.

Patriotic groups have arranged day-long pilgrimages to the Unknown Soldier's Tomb, where the highlights of the observances will be an address by Undersecretary of State Sumner Welles at 1:30 p. m. The program, to be held under auspices of the Grand Army of the Republic Memorial Day Corporation, will include the singing of the National Anthem by Jan Peerce, of the Metropolitan Opera Company and renditions by the Camp Lee Glee Club. James G. Yaden, president of the memorial organization, will preside. Participating will be the United States Marine Band; the American Legion National Guard of Honor, and the Legion Boys' Drum and Bugles Corps.

Six Bands to Take Part

Six bands, including the Marine, Army and Navy organizations, will pace the parade. The others are the Regimental band of the Infantry Combat Team, the Air Force Band, Bolling Field, and a band from the Engineer Replacement Center. The reviewing stand will be occupied by high Government, service and diplomatic representatives and opposite it will be a public stand to accommodate 7500 spectators.

A schedule of today's event follows:

Exercises at the Georgetown Law School Building, Sixth and E Streets Northwest, 10 a. m. Speakers, Vice Admiral S. M. Robinson, U. S. N.; Senator Joseph Christopher O'Mahoney of Wyoming and the Rev. Francis E. Lucey, S. J., regent of Georgetown University, and George E. Hamilton, dean, Georgetown University. The program is in tribute to Georgetown Law School men who gave their lives in the World War.

Address by Undersecretary of State Sumner Welles at Arlington Amphitheater, 1:30 p. m.

Services of the Second Division Association of the District of Columbia at the Second Division Monument, Seventeenth Street and Constitution Avenue, 11:15 a. m.

Memorial Day military parade, starting at 4 p. m. at New Jersey Avenue and B Street Southeast, to culminate at Seventeenth Street and Constitution Avenue.

Washington Branch, No. 7, Third Division, A. E. F. pilgrimage to Arlington National Cemetery to place wreaths on the Unknown Soldier's Tomb and the graves of Maj. Gen. Joseph T. Dickman, commander of the Third Division, and Maj. Gen. Ulysses G. McAlexander, commander of the Thirty-eighth Infantry, A. E. F. The ceremonies will begin at 2:30 p. m.

DID YOU EVER SEE A TREE WALK? Well, this is it. George A. Petrides, National Capital Parks naturalist, conducts a group of vacationers, newcomers to Washington and long-time residents, on a "tree walk" in Rock Creek Park. The event is held every Sunday afternoon.

Spending Your Vacation at Home?

Rare Display of Natural Beauty Close at Hand

(Because of wartime restrictions on gasoline, annual leave and—just around the corner—train and bus travel, stay-at-home vacations may be the rule here this summer. This is the seventh and last in a series by Mr. Kelly describing recreational opportunities in the Capital's own backyard.)

By Edward J. Kelly
Administrative Officer, National Capital Parks

It isn't necessary to travel to Charleston or any other distant place to find the unique and beautiful garden that you have been longing to visit. Get up early in the morning, long before the earliest of the staggered-hour workers begin to stir, and take a Kenilworth streetcar out to Douglas Street Northeast. From that point it is but a short walk to the Kenilworth Aquatic Gardens and on a fair day, beginning early in June, you will find the most unusual and extensive planting of water lilies and other aquatic plants waiting to greet you in full bloom.

These gardens were founded in 1880 by the late W. B. Shaw, but were acquired as a public institution by the National Park Service several years ago. They consist of 40-odd ponds with a plant population of approximately 100,000. The mixed colors of all varieties produce a display of rare beauty. Later in the season the tropical varieties will also be in bloom, and with them the Egyptian lotus and a hundred other water plants. There is nothing like it elsewhere in the world. I emphasize the early morning aspect of this visit because the flowers fold up to protect themselves from the scalding rays of the summer sun before the day is very old. You may also be privileged to observe the night bloomers before they turn in for the day.

There are many other celebrated gardens in Washington. The Bishop's Garden of the Cathedral of Sts. Peter and Paul at Massachusetts Avenue and Woodley Road Northwest, the Franciscan Monastery Garden at Fourteenth and Quincy Streets Northeast, the Potomac Park rose garden just east of Fourteenth Street at Waterside Drive, and the famous park pansy garden just west of Fourteenth Street in the same park, the formal gardens at Dumbarton Oaks, Thirtieth and R Streets Northwest, in old Georgetown, and the delightful naturalistically landscaped valley park of the same name which the former owners of the estate donated to the National Capital Park system two years ago, and the U. S. Botanic Garden are among the most famous. If you are a real garden fan and are willing to squander the 3 gallons of gasoline that the ration board allotted you for the week, you will find scores of private gardens in nearby Virginia and Maryland well worth the effort and the motor fuel.

And, speaking of things beautiful, the National Capital Parks naturalist program schedules a 4-mile hike over the park trails that traverse hill, valley and streamside in areas richly endowed by nature, under the expert guidance of a park naturalist each Saturday afternoon, and a tree and wildflower walk in the form of a leisurely stroll on each Sunday afternoon. Announcements of these events are published in the daily papers, but you may obtain additional information by telephoning Republic 1820, extension 2557.

This article brings to an end the vacation series, but it by no means brings to an end the long list of things to do in Washington. Many tourist interests, the visiting of historic homes, churches, lodges, types of sports, water excursions, theatrical attractions, day trips by rail and bus to nearby cities, historic shrines and scenic locations, and a score of other interests have been neglected because of space limitations. These you may learn by consulting your daily papers and the weekly publications devoted to making Washington better known to Washingtonians. Try taking your vacation at home this year—there'll never be a dull moment.

Erie, Pa., May 29 (A.P.).—An air raid warden reported this sign was on the front door of a house where he found lights burning during the first city-wide blackout test:

"Air raid wardens keep off my property."

The warden said he complied—but cut the electric line running into the house.

One Way to Evade Draft

Camp Roberts, Calif., May 29 (A.P.).—"I'm satisfied with my present employment, I do not care to be drafted and just what are you going to do about it?" That's what John D. Vincent wrote to his draft board in Belton, Mont., after receiving his questionnaire. And he got away with it. But he filled out the questionnaire, listing his residence as Camp Roberts. Vincent had enlisted.

Taxi Strike Is Postponed To June 15

Drivers' Union To Seek Injunction Blocking Operation Of New Zone Plan

United Cab Drivers, Inc., last night decided to postpone until June 15 its taxicab strike scheduled for midnight Sunday and announced that it would file an application Monday to secure a temporary injunction restraining the Public Utilities Commission from putting into effect the new zoning system.

Its action came at the close of a rip-roaring mass meeting at 808 I Street Northwest where P. U. C. Chairman Gregory Hankin was heartily and, at times, eloquently denounced following disclosure that a petition was being circulated among cab drivers calling on Congress to impeach the commission head.

Four or five hours earlier, the P. U. C. extended its taxi rate order, supposed to go into effect June 1, for two weeks, and attributed the postponement to delays in receiving printed copies of the official order.

Trying to "Save Face," They Say

"Because of these delays," Hankin said, "the printed order was not available until today, and as that gave only one day to file any protests or objections, we decided to postpone the date of the order until 12:01 a. m., June 15."

But the cabbies, and E. A. Glenn, their spokesman, said that Hankin was merely trying to "save face" and giving himself time in which to find an "out."

Following last night's meeting, Glenn told a Post reporter that if an injunction against the P. U. C. order could be obtained and a rehearing on the zoning and rate changes secured, the strike order for June 15 would be withdrawn. Otherwise, he said, it stands.

Earlier, he had told about 100 cab drivers that he did not know whether the two-week postponement allowed sufficient time in which to comply with all the legal formalities necessary to secure an injunction, but said that on the advice of counsel it had been recommended that such a course be tried.

Hankin Criticism Applauded

"Once we get Gregory Hankin into court we can lick him," Glenn shouted.

When he declared that "I do not believe Hankin is the proper man to be chairman of the PUC" there was loud applause and stomping.

The cabbies represented by the union, which has but 62 members, but last night decided to let down the bars and conduct a membership campaign, is asking a 30-cent rate for a trip confined to one zone and 20 cents for each additional zone; a rate of 80 cents for trips to the new War Department Building in Arlington provided cabs are not allowed to pick up passengers on their return, 60 cents otherwise, and various other charges for waiting, extra service, extra stops, handling of trunks, etc.

Glenn estimated last night that the new P.U.C. zoning order takes 60 per cent of the third zone hauls, now charged for at a 60-cent rate, and puts them into the second zone, 40-cent class. Ninety per cent of "our best business" in the fourth zone, 80-cent class, he added, is moved into the third zone, 60-cent class, by the PUC order.

Claim $10,000 Daily Loss

He declared cabbies, as a group, would lose an average of $10,000 daily under the new system, a loss which would be compensated by an approximate 5-cent increase in daily earnings because of the decrease in the size of the first zone.

The Department of Labor Conciliation Commission, which had been consulted by union representatives yesterday, declined to enter into the controversy, saying that "since the question does not involve employer-employe relationship, but seems to be a question of an order issued by the Public Utilities Commission, it is not within our jurisdiction."

Mrs. J. A. Miller Killed Knocking Nests From Roof

Mrs. Joseph A. Miller, 55, of 6741 Eastern Avenue, Takoma Park, Md., was killed yesterday when she fell from a third-story window of her home while she apparently was trying to knock sparrows' nests out of the eaves of the roof.

A long-handled mop and some old newspapers were found beside her body, which was discovered by her neighbor, Mrs. Bladen Forest.

MRS. MILLER

A Takoma Park Volunteer Fire Department ambulance took her to the Washington Sanitarium, where she was pronounced dead.

According to her son, Joseph Miller, Jr., his mother had been bothered by sparrows under the roof for some time.

Dr. C. E. Hawks, Montgomery County medical examiner, withheld the certificate of death to determine whether she died of a broken neck or a heart attack. He will confer with her family physician.

Mrs. Miller, a resident of Takoma Park for 22 years was a Federal employee in the Longfellow Building, where she worked nights for the last year.

Born in Baltimore, Md., she lived in Washington for 10 years before moving to Takoma Park. Besides her husband and son, Mrs. Miller is survived by her father, John Volk; a brother, George Volk of Baltimore, and a sister, Mrs. Anna Bussart of Washington.

FDIC Head Tells Catholic U. Graduates 'More Abundant Life' Goal of Democracy; Bishop Corrigan Hopes for U.S., Papal Plan

The new concept of the role of government in a democracy, as opposed to "the older concept of free enterprise," was portrayed yesterday morning for Catholic University graduates by Leo T. Crowley, chairman of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, who declared that "the older system of privilege and protection of vested interests, the older imperialisms are on the way out, and we are going to try to do something for the poor and the downtrodden everywhere."

Slowly but surely, he told 726 candidates for degrees at the university's fifty-third commencement exercises, "the conviction is growing in our minds that this war will be lost unless it is won in terms of a more abundant life for ordinary folk everywhere."

He shared the speakers' platform with the Most Rev. Joseph Corrigan, rector of the university, who expressed hope that "our young Nation—a Republic—and the oldest institution in the civilized world—the papacy—will stand on a united program (after the war) worthy of our patriotism, worthy of our loving devotion to the Holy Father, Pope Pius XII." His address was entitled "Pope Pius XII."

In addition to the students who received degrees, the Right Rev. P. J. McCormick, vice rector of the university, conferred the honorary degree of doctor of laws upon Dr. Leo S. Rowe, director of the Pan American Union; Gen. Wladyslaw Sikorski, commander in chief and prime minister of Poland (accepted for him by the Polish Ambassador, Jan Ciechanowski); the Right Rev. Joseph M. Gleason, of Oakland, Calif., an alumnus and benefactor, and the Rev. Father John P. McCaughan, of Worcester, Mass., the university's oldest living alumnus.

Crowley told the assembly that although Americans shrink from "a larger and wider use of government in the direction of our national affairs" it had become increasingly clear during the last 25 years "that the common good requires the exercise of common effort and in most cases the only adequate instrument for such effort is government."

"To put it another way," the FDIC chairman declared, "what is emerging is a new concept of the role of government in the affairs of a democratic people."

Bishop Corrigan dwelt largely, in his address, on what he called "the dominant position of the Father of Christendom and the Vatican as a true center of disinterested planning for world concord among nations.

102 Promotions and Transfers Of Policemen Announced

One hundred and two "routine" promotions, transfers and changes in assignments of Metropolitan policemen to be effective Monday were revealed by Maj. Edward J. Kelly, superintendent of police, late yesterday.

Included in the list are the assignments of 47 rookie patrolmen from the police school and of 13 newly mounted motorcycle officers.

The other changes were necessitated by recent retirements and promotions. One captain, three lieutenants, six sergeants and two detective sergeants, promoted last week by the Commissioners, received their assignments.

Capt. Nelson O. Holmes was placed in command of the Fifth Precinct to take the place of Capt. Joseph V. Morgan, whose retirement will be effective Monday.

Assignments for the three sergeants promoted to lieutenants sent Otha R. Sanders of the Traffic Division to the Harbor Precinct as commanding officer. He fills a vacancy left by the retirement of Lieut. William J. Carlin. Lieuts. Cyrus F. Perry and Chester C. Gouldman were sent to the Tenth and the Second Precincts respectively.

Fourteen sergeants were effected by the shakeup. D. O. Fletcher was transferred from the Eleventh to the Eighth Precinct; Joseph T. Kerby, Fourth to Fifth; Thomas Poland, Thirteenth to Eleventh; Earl D. Alber, Ninth to Thirteenth; Horace Skinner, Second to Seventh; Joe Johnson, Thirteenth to Ninth; Marion B. Payne, Seventh to Thirteenth; William M. Sanford, Fifth to Traffic Division; John L. Mason, Administrative Headquarters to Eighth Precinct; Forrest L. Binswanger, Boys Club to Accident Investigation Unit; Francis W. Marple, Fifth to Fourth; George V. Moore, Second Precinct; Jack Milstead, Traffic Division to Eighth Precinct, and Richard Burton from temporary to full sergeant to remain at Sixth Precinct.

Two newly made detective sergeants, Watson Salkeld and Andrew McCullum, were detailed to the Detective Bureau.

Thirteen privates who recently completed training in the school for motorcycle men to be assigned to the Traffic Division are: Lawrence L. Mason, Clinton E. Humphries, Joseph E. Claffy, Ernest R. Amos, Richard G. Clagett, Remy G. Ducote, Aivin C. Hammack, Vernie E. Tate, Nedabiah S. Best, Donald Moore, Francis J. Smith, James K. McCarthy and Thomas Lundegran.

Rookies from the police school who will begin their first tour of duty and their assignments are:

Jesse W. Ates, Eleventh Precinct; John F. Bradley, Ninth Precinct; George E. Causey, Third Precinct; Everett L. Cooper, Third Precinct; Clinton G. Clarke, Thirteenth Precinct; James D. Crawford, Eighth Precinct; Anthony A. Cuosso, Fifth Precinct; Hubert C. Davis, Eleventh Precinct; Robert W. Dennett, Eighth Precinct; George R. Donohue, Fifth Precinct; Albert G. Fielder, First Precinct; James L. Freeman, Seventh Precinct; Joseph M. Frye, Eleventh Precinct; Keith G. Gosman, Twelfth Precinct; Glenn M. Griffin, jr., Fourth Precinct; Robert W. Haun, Eleventh Precinct; Charles R. Johnson, Ninth Precinct; Sebrone J. King, jr., Thirteenth Precinct; Robert O. Kissner, Tenth Precinct; Emmett J. Kitchen, Ninth Precinct; John E. Landry, Fourth Precinct; John P. Lutz, Sixth Precinct; James M. Lynch, Twelfth Precinct.

Bradford A. McClendon, Traffic Division; James R. McMahan, Second Precinct; Karl M. Moskowitz, Second Precinct; Harry B. Mundy, jr., Fourth Precinct; Frank C. Palmer, jr., Traffic Division; Bernard J. Panetta, Fifth Precinct; Brantley C. Pridgen, Second Precinct; Thomas G. Quinn, jr., Fifth Precinct; John O. Riley, Eighth Precinct; Vernon C. Sanders, Eleventh Precinct; Jennings W. Schana, Traffic Division; James F. Smith, Seventh Precinct; John A. Stewart, Twelfth Precinct; William F. Sturgeon, jr., First Precinct; James T. Thrift, Third Precinct; Thomas F. Walker, Thirteenth Precinct; Arthur L. Weber, First Precinct; George W. Whaley, Traffic Division; William B. Whitlock, Second Precinct; Thomas E. Williams, Thirteenth Precinct; Andrew R. Wilson, Seventh Precinct; William C. Wright, Tenth Precinct; Victor J. Xander, Sixth Precinct; William J. Zerwick, Twelfth Precinct.

Tuberculosis Hospital May Be Reopened

Senate Subcommittee Considers Using Old Plant to Relieve Hospitalization Needs

A possible reopening of the old District Tuberculosis Hospital at Fourteenth and Upshur Streets Northwest, to stem the increasing shortage of local hospitalization facilities, was considered yesterday at a Senate Appropriations Subcommittee session on the 1943 District budget bill.

The disclosure came as a result of testimony offered by Dr. George C. Ruhland, District health officer, who appeared before the committee along with Public Welfare officials, P. U. C. Chairman Gregory Hankin and traffic and highway officers.

With testimony completed on almost all of the major budget items, Chairman O'Mahoney (Democrat), of Wyoming, expressed hopes that hearings on the supply bill might be concluded with a session scheduled for Monday morning.

Priority Troubles Arise

A proposal to press the abandoned Polk School into service as a temporary medical center also was laid before the committee during the discussion of Health Department needs.

It was revealed that priority troubles have been added to the hospitalization problems, reducing the likelihood that new facilities can be built even if funds are granted. Use of the Polk School was suggested by Ruhland to replace a new building for which a budget estimate had been submitted, because of doubts that necessary priorities could be obtained.

With the possibility looming that other old buildings would have to be put back on active duty, O'Mahoney asked the Commissioners to prepare for reference a full list of all now abandoned school buildings.

The probable lack of building material with which to expand Gallinger or Glenn Dale was also pointed out as the reason for considering reopening of the Upshur Street hospital. Should it be reopened, it was added, it would be used to house only convalescent patients.

Still another priority problem was aired by Public Welfare officials in connection with the proposed building of a new Children's Receiving Home. An appropriation of $121,000 last year with which to erect such a structure has not been used, the committee was told, because materials could not be obtained. O'Mahoney expressed hope that priorities could be granted for this relatively small project, however, rather than force continued rent and repair expenditures on present quarters at 816 Potomac Avenue Southeast.

Requests for additional personnel, turned down by the House, were presented by Public Utility Commission and traffic department officials.

'Juke Girl,' at the Earle, Is a Tempestuous Melo

Ann Sheridan, in Title Role, Heads Ace Cast In an Exciting Story of the Florida Migrants; Stabile Orchestra, Gracie Barrie on Stage

"JUKE GIRL." Warner Brothers' picturization of a story by Theodore Pratt, adapted to the screen by Kenneth Gamet and A. I. Bezzerides, starring Ann Sheridan and Ronald Reagan, with Richard Whorf, George Tobias, Alan Hale, Gene Lockhart, Betty Brewer, Howard da Silva, Donald MacBride, Willard Robertson, Faye Emerson, Willie Best, Fuzzy Knight, Spencer Charters, William B. Davidson, Frank Wilcox and William Haade. Directed by Curtis Bernhardt. At the Earle Theater.

THE INGREDIENTS that have been poured into "Juke Girl," the new screen feature at the Earle, are almost uninterruptedly those of violence and human exploitation, with slight overtones of the squalor and poverty of "Grapes of Wrath."

If that sounds unpleasant, it is in consonance with the major trend of the story, originally written by Theodore Pratt and adapted to the cameras by Kenneth Gamet and A. I. Bezzerides. The picture isn't pleasant, save in its final revelation of the happy outcome of the romantic thread that weaves its way through the tempestuous action.

Those who enjoy the turbulence of the wildest of the "Westerns" will find the same qualities in "Juke Girl." It is thickly studded with vicious fights, involves a murder, an attempted lynching of two innocent people and the eventual undoing of the tycoon of the fruit and vegetable market, who is a blusteringly brutal bully when surrounded by his gang of hired thugs and a craven coward when the tables are turned.

The scene of the play is the dismal little town of Cat-Tail, Fla., with a population of 300-odd in the off season and thousands at harvest and canning time. The place is under the despotic rule of the owner of the local produce market and canning plant. Into the settlement, along with all the others, drift two migrants from the wheat fields of Kansas, and a Nebraska gal, who ekes out a precarious living selling her dances in the juke joints. She is a chilled-steel number, wise to all the answers. So is one of the boys—the one who detecs the scent of real money on the side of Henry Madden, whose name should have been Simon Legree. The other lad is a bit of an idealist, with a yen for a piece of land of his own, a wife and kids running about the place. The partnership with his pal cracks up when he champions the cause of Nick Garcos, the honest Greek truck farmer, who is being unmercifully pushed around—when he is not being beaten—by Mr. Madden and his boys.

Out of all this filter the ruthless events already intimated.

Despite the fact that it is pretty strong meat, "Juke Girl" is no "horror" picture. It has rather more than a fair share of lawlessnes and blood-letting, to be sure, but mixed with all that are many deft comedy touches, a passable insight into human nature and the occasional warm notes of that romance we were speaking about. The action rushes along at violent speed and at no time will an audience be bored any more than it will be charmed. It will, on the contrary, be thoroughly aroused, excited and occasionally outraged. Quite as emphatically, it will be conscious of many splendid performances by those in the pivotal roles and of the sturdy realism with which the piece has been produced and directed by Hal B. Wallis and Curtis Bernhardt, respectively.

A Carefully Hand-Picked Cast

In the title role, Ann Sheridan will recall the sort of portrayal she brought to "Torrid Zone," before having achieved more dignified stature as an actress in such films as "The Man Who Came to Dinner" and "Kings Row." She plays with a fine lusty brazenness for the greater part, but lends rich variety to her impersonation by now and again revealing a sensitiveness, warmth and charm that bring full body to the character. Ronald Reagan and Richard Whorf, are sharply contrasted and nicely matched in ability as the embattled migrants, and Gene Lockhart contributes one of his characteristically perfect portrayals of a counterfeit "big shot" in the malicious role of Madden. George Tobias, as Garcos, is a vital source of comedy as well as the embodiment of the whole pith of the play. Alan Hale, relieves the tension, too, with comic gusto and little Betty Brewer adds to the melodrama's lighter spirit with delightful guile. Howard da Silva, Donald MacBride, Willard Robertson, Spencer Charters and Willie Best are among others in the long cast whose performances add up to real assets.

Returning to the scene of an earlier success, Dick Stabile and His Orchestra, with Washington's favorite, Gracie Barrie, as songstress, provide the framework and background of a lively and tuneful stage revue. The orchestra long since has established itself in the top-flight, with its conductor's saxaphoning no small factor in its pre-eminence. Gracie, of course, is sure-fire before any Capital audience. Her one appearance encompasses such solid hits as "Somebody Else Is Taking My Place," "I Don't Want to Walk Without You," "Arthur Murray Taught Me to Dance in a Hurry" and "I Said No," with Hubby Stabile as the other half of a clever duet arrangement. In Allen, Burns and Cody, the bill has the season's top team of gymnasts and in Paul Regan, an impersonator who gets better and better as he goes along. What he goes along to turns out finally to be a substantial hit.

Lieut. Jimmy Stewart's "Winning Your Wings," one of the best short reels that has come out of the war effort, and the newsreel are the only auxiliaries of a feature designed for the sturdier spirits and tougher tastes.

Stars Sell Bonds On Post Square

Today from 12 to 6, the former District of Columbia Information Center, located opposite this paper on Post Square will be "Movie House," and the entertainers from the Earle and Capitol stage shows will be in the booth selling war stamps and bonds.

Use of the Movie House will launch the theaters' drive to sell stamps and bonds. You can now buy stamps or sign bond pledges in any theater in Washington and in many of the downtown theaters, special lobby displays will add to the bond and stamp appeal.

Salesmen this afternoon will include Gracie Barrie and Dick Stabile, Henry Youngman, the Radio Aces, Lynn Allison, Sam Jack Kaufman, the Rhythm Rockets and other favorite entertainers from the Capitol and Earle. The Loew Cadet Band will provide music.

Columbia

Produced by Edward Small for United Artists, with Brian Donlevy, Miriam Hopkins and Preston Foster in the costellar roles, "A Gentleman After Dark," on Thursday took up its F Street residence in Loew's Columbia Theater, following an initial week at the Capitol.

Probably intended to be more emotionally stirring than it is, there is unfolded here the story of the jewel thief, who took his punishment for the sake of a small daughter and then broke jail to protect her happiness in later years. In the title role, Brian Donlevy easily is the dominant member of the cast. Miss Hopkins may have found her part a little outside her favorite metier and Mr. Foster has less to do than his recognized ability as an actor of force would seem to justify.

But these three do not comprise the sum total of the acting company or the full measure of its capacity. Other important parts are efficiently played by Harold Huber, Philip Reed, Gloria Holden, Douglas Dumbrille, Sharon Douglas and Bill Henry, under the direction of Edwin L. Marin.

The Columbia's current bill is augmented, as usual, by shorter screen subjects and the new issue of the newsreel.

John Barrymore Dies

fore his death had returned to the Catholic faith of his youth and had received the last sacrament.

John Barrymore outlived fame.

Thirty years ago he was the matinee idol of an entire Nation. In the old days of the "silents" and even afterwards, he was the great profile, the darling of the "royal family" of the stage.

But with the passing of the years—and as his private life became more and more public—he became, despite his genius in the theater, a tabloid character.

"I, you know, am the greatest balloon ascensionist ever placed on this earth," he said, somewhat wittfully in 1939, when his repeated quarrels and separations from his fourth wife, Elaine Barry, had attracted more attention than his stage and screen appearances.

He had been rich—and broke. He had been the toast of millions—and the gossip of millions. He was tired, very tired. Everything that mattered already had happened, so very long ago.

Clean-cut, heart-breakingly handsome, impetuous, young, John Barrymore made his stage debut in Chicago at Cleveland's Theater in 1903. It was an event. John was the second son and the youngest child of Maurice Barrymore and Georgia Drew. The theater was his heritage. His brother, Lionel, and his sister, Ethel, were to become equally famous. John worked hard, and success came readily.

Shortly after his first official performance John and Lionel went on the road with a stock company. Then roles poured in. He scored his first real hit as a light comedian in a trivial piece called "The Stubborn Cinderella." And then, just to prove he was a Barrymore, he triumphed in a serious role in Galsworthy's "Justice." The inevitable course of his career had begun. "Richard III" saw him almost at once at his peak. His "Hamlet" was cheered to the well-known echo even in London.

And then, too, he began marrying.

First wife was pretty blonde Katherine Harris, New York society girl. That was on September 1, 1910.

Barrymore was 28. She was 18. It was a popular marriage. His picture then was in millions of boudoirs.

Mrs. Barrymore, too, achieved success. She was adopted by the "royal family," went on the stage with John, Ethel and Lionel and became a creditable actress.

The marriage lasted seven years. The divorce was a friendly one.

In 1920 he was married again, this time to a New York and Newport society matron, the divorced wife of a Philadelphia sportsman, Mrs. Leonard Thomas—better known, then and now, as Michael Strange. She wrote. Shortly after they were married, with somewhat indifferent success, she wrote a play for the Barrymore family. And, within a year, she became the mother of Diana, John Barrymore's daughter, now herself an actress of some talent.

Michael Strange developed as a writer and Barrymore as an even greater actor, but the marriage didn't last. They drifted apart in two years or so, but were not divorced for eight.

Meanwhile, Barrymore's screen career had reached new peaks. In the silent days he had starred in a long list of pictures—"Svengali," "Moby Dick," "Sherlock Holmes," "Rasputin and the Empress," "Twentieth Century." And many more.

The story becomes repetitious.

In Hollywood one day John Barrymore saw a beautiful blonde leaving a studio. He turned on his charm, which never, before or since, failed him. Dolores Costello became his leading lady. She played opposite him in three pictures and then became his wife. She was the 22-year-old daughter of Maurice Costello—he of the beauteous marcel and the silent screen.

They were divorced October 9, 1935.

By then the tabloids were having a field day.

Barrymore had met Elaine Barry. She was 19, a coed at Hunter College. Barrymore was recovering from influenza, bronchitis and considerable over-indulgence in a New York hospital. She wrote him a fan letter.

After his recovery the two were frequently seen together in New York night clubs. Miss Barry was a guest upon the actor's yacht, Infanta, upon a cruise to Havana. She appeared with him as his guest on an hour-long radio program. And, curvesome and scarlet-lipped, she reveled in publicity. She was going to be a great actress.

Their courtship was as public as it was stormy.

Elaine chased Barrymore across the continent and he switched trains in an effort to avoid her. Their letters, signed "Ariel" and "Caliban" became the juiciest tabloid headline material you can imagine.

Miss Costello ignored it all. In obtaining her divorce she charged Barrymore was bad-tempered, that he had once struck her, and that for two years he had drunk to excess. She was awarded the custody of their two children, Dolores Ethel, born April 8, 1930, and John, born June 4, 1932.

In Yuma—the Gretna Green of Arizona—the romance of the great lover had its anticlimax on the morning of November 9, 1935. Elaine was then 21. He was 54.

The courtship had been front-paged two years.

Two months after the marriage front pages told of the Barrymore's separation.

There was a grand reconciliation, more separations, more scenes of true love reunited. Melodrama became comedy, comedy became farce. It was all too bad.

Yet the Barrymore charm was far from vanished. In 1939, after a 15-year absence, John returned to the stage. His triumph was instantaneous—with everyone but Miss Barry.

She had a role in the play, "My Dear Children," in which Barrymore, as her father, spanked her. She said he spanked too hard, and in St. Louis one night, walked out on him and the show.

John went on with the play, with Doris Dudley in Elaine's part. When the play opened on Broadway, marking his first appearance on that glittering boulevard in 7 years, the critics gave him rave notices. Elaine, of course, came back—temporarily.

He played two more starring roles, perhaps three.

He went bankrupt. His creditors at one time had claims of more than $100,000—while he earned a $6700 a week salary.

He was present and stole part of the spotlight at his daughter's first real stage success, "The Land Is Bright." And Diana kissed him.

And on his deathbed he had a last, profound moment. He was taken back into the faith of his childhood, made his last confession and received the final rites of the church.

He was truly of the stage's "royal family"—despite many of the absurdities of his life even his grandmother, Louisa Lane Drew, would at times have been proud of him.

Curtain.

Starring three of England's outstanding actors, "The Invaders" is an exciting and imaginative tale which traces the flight of six Nazi survivors of a wrecked submarine across the Canadian countryside. Leslie Howard, Lawrence Olivier and Raymond Massey appear as a cross-section of English subjects, who, each in his own way, meets and conquers the threat of "The Invaders." Anton Walbrook plays superbly the gentle leaders of the Hutterites settlement, whose people are encountered in the flight of the Germans. Eric Portman, as the Nazi commander, turns in an intelligent and forceful performance.
The film was begun in England and finished in Canada. The photography is excellent and affords some wondrous scenic views of our Northern neighbor. The picture has been directed at a rapid pace which very neatly ties together the individual episodes.
This is probably the best "war picture" yet to be made, so, if you haven't seen it, make it a point to visit the Metropolitan this week, where it resumed its midcity run yesterday.

Gomez Humiliates Nats as Yankees Win, 16-1

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

New York, May 29.—Even the author of baseball's biggest mystery of the season—Joe DiMaggio's batting slump—can't assemble any solution of it. The wherefore of Joe's .260 average has left him in a complete fog and in great self-disgust. Today he was saying "Maybe I just struck my stride."

POVICH

Like any other ball player in a long slump, DiMaggio is unhappy these days and is angry with himself. When Bobby Estalella of the Nats saw DiMag sitting forlornly on a trunk outside the Yankee dressing room and asked "Wassamat Joe, you no heet good," DiMaggio mustered a wry smile.

"I no heet a dam beet," said DiMaggio, mimicking Estalella's English. "How are you fielding bunts, Bobby?" He asked and then added, "You don't have to worry about me bunting, I can't hit a ball that far."

Never in the wildest imagination of New York baseball writers could they picture a situation on the Yankee lub which obtains at this time. Buddy Hassett, who was on the bench at the start of the season because Manager Joe McCarthy didn't like him as a hitter, is now out-batting DiMaggio by more than 50 points.

Weak-Sister Hassett is banging away at a .315 pace while DiMaggio, the club's power hitter, is hovering around .260.

DiMaggio says he has tried everything to untrack himself but thus far it has been no use. "I'm not hitting the ball and I guess that's all there is to it. This is the first time I ever was up against anything like this and it does some funny things to you. After a while, you don't act like yourself.

Joe Hits a Long One With Povich's Help

"The other day I made up my mind to hit the first pitch they threw me. Whoever was pitching against us had walked two men in a row and I figured he'd try to get the first pitch over the plate against me. I went up there ready to swing my head off and that first pitch did come in there right through the middle and big as a grapefruit. And, dammit, I couldn't get my bat off my shoulder. I just stood there like a dope."

(Editor's note—So help us, as these words were being written in the Yankee Stadium press box, Joe DiMaggio just pounded a home run into the left-field stands, his second hit of the game. But he only gets an assist. We take most of the credit.)

His Yankee teammates are reluctant about talking to DiMaggio about his slump, as is usually the case on ball clubs. Red Ruffing says nobody can help a fellow in a hitting slump. "He's got to straighten it out for himself," says Ruffing. "It's mostly mental, anyway."

"A slump does funny things to a guy," went on Ruffing. "I was playing golf last winter and was in an awful slump with my putting. Every putt I hit was short, and I was ruining my score. I came up to one green with a 20-foot putt to make and I announced that no matter if I hit the ball 20 feet past the cup I was going to have the satisfaction of not being short on this one. So I stepped up and hit it—ten feet short of the cup. That's the kind of thing you do in a slump."

McCarthy Warns Reporter About Interview

A few years ago when the late Lou Gehrig encountered a long slump and wasn't hitting .250, a reporter interviewed him on the Yankee bench and Manager Joe McCarthy interrupted. "Hey, you," said McCarthy, "don't you know better than to talk to a ball player who's in a slump? He doesn't know why and couldn't tell you if he tried. So, when you want to find out about batting slumps, I'm the man to talk to. I was in a slump all my life. I never hit .300 in my whole career and am an authority on slumps. I can tell you that nobody knows why they are in a slump."

Two years ago, Buddy Lewis' batting average slumped horribly from a lofty .350 figure and he was hitting barely .250 after a long period in which he couldn't buy or get the loan of any sort of a hit. Lewis was completely baffled and then he broke down and confessed:

"I can't get comfortable when I'm up at that plate. I don't know where to put my feet any more, this thing has got me so nuts. You may not believe this, but I can't remember how I used to stand when I was hitting good. I guess I won't start hitting again until some day, by accident, I find a comfortable position up there.

Dat Old Debbil Slump respects nobody, though, it seems. Of all the hitters who supposedly might be immune to any such protracted futility as has beset DiMaggio, Joe himself was supposed to be the guy. With his stylish flat, flawless swing, minus any hitches or waggling, DiMaggio seemed to be qualifying as the perfect hitter. And then this thing came along. Old Man Slump takes on all comers and is still the champion for as long as he cares to string along.

On the Line

—With CONSIDINE

A Great Horse Race in Prospect

New York, May 29.—The greatest horserace run this year—and maybe for a long time—was the Dixie Handicap early this month at Pimlico. Whirlaway came from far back to overtake Attention, Mioland and Challedon in a tremendous stretch duel. Only one and a half lengths separated the first and fourth horse.

CONSIDINE

Tomorrow we may get a reissue of the gallop which Ben Jones pronounced the greatest horserace he had ever seen. With the exception of Mioland, who has gone bad from overwork, the Dixie headliners will be on hand for the mile and a quarter Suburban at Belmont. In place of Mioland in this field will be Market Wise, who whipped Whirly in the Jockey Club Gold Cup at Belmont last fall. His handlers think he can do it again.

That it will be a tremendous Suburban no one doubts. Few Kentucky Derbies have been run in less than 2:03. The last five Suburbans have been—the best being Snark's 2:01 2/5 in 1938. They'll pile 129 pounds on Whirly, but he'll still be odds-on in a field that has Market Wise and Attention in at 124, Challedon, 122; Painted Veil, 112 and Can't Wait, 109. It is Whirly's toughest task of the year. A victory, by the way, would shove the superb-looking thoroughbred's life earnings past Sun Beau's mark of $376,744—which for so long led the purse pack, until Seabiscuit posted $437,730.

We expect enemies of monopoly to begin a campaign soon to break up Ernie Bonham.

Boxing Knows Its Bill of Rights

If you believe that freedom of thought is being tampered with these days, look to New York boxing judges and be reassured. The last three shows at the Garden—Stolz vs. Angott, Pastor vs. Mauriello and Robinson vs. Servo—resulted in split decisions. The referees and brace of judges varied vehemently, but the prize of the lot was their scrambled outlook on the Robinson-Servo match. Billy Cavanagh, the referee, called it five rounds for Servo, three for Robinson and two even. Judge Tom Curley voted nine rounds for Robinson and one for Servo.

There are those who decry this sort of thing, and shout "leave us have some unity." We're not one of them. We like the independence of it all. No one has ever built a suitable yardstick for measuring the priority of one man's punches over another man's. We like the free and lively and aggressively eccentric thinking of New York's judges. Our favorite was the one, now passed on, who gave Arturo Godoy 13 rounds out of 15 the night Arturo did his zombie squat against Joe Louis. For runner-up honors, we lean toward Arthur Donovan, who had Primo Carnera well ahead of Max Baer just before da preem went down for the umpteenth and final time.

Judging fights is the least exact of the sciences, excepting, of course, the science of handicapping horses.

N. L. Catchers Are Catching the Hits

Did you notice last Wednesday that the five leading hitters of the National League were catchers? Well, we did, which may be further proof of an arrested development. Anyway, they were Babe Phelps, Pirates, .352; Ray Lamanno, Reds, .351; Ernie Lombardi, Braves, .348; Walker Cooper, Cards, .341 and Mickey Owen, Dodgers, .328.

Another batting rarity that same day, and it continues, were the cases of Bobby Doerr, Red Sox, and Joe Gordon, Yankees. Doerr hit .282 last season and has averaged .290 as a major leaguer. Gordon hit .276 last year, one percentage point over his lifetime average. On this day we speak of Doerr was leading the American League with .391. Gordon was second with .390.

How can you explain that? If you know the answer, then be merciful enough to tip off those American League pitchers.

Al Vanderbilt got off a pretty good crack on the air after the Withers. Ted Husing asked him if he visited Santa Anita during his recent trip to the coast. "Yeah," Al said, "But I couldn't get in. I didn't have a badge . . . or slant eyes."

If we can borrow a Spanish-English dictionary we'll interview the Washington Nationals for you tomorrow.

Jim Turnesa Ousts Hogan From P. G. A.

Soldier Wins On 35th Hole, 2 and 1

Winner Meets Nelson Today; Cooper, Wood Bow; Snead, Demaret Advance at Seaview

By the Associated Press

Atlantic City, N. J., May 29.—A slow, painstaking son of an Elmsford, (N. Y.) greenskeeper—Corpl. Jim Turnesa—knocked Ben Hogan out of the Professional Golf Association championships at Seaview Club today, thereby injecting some welcome color and excitement into an otherwise cut and dried event.

When the swarthy little soldier, who has never won a golf meet of any real impo-tance, sank the putt that eliminated the Great Hogan on the thirty-fifth green, 2 and 1, he joined three of golfdom's regulars in tomorrow's semifinals, and he appeared duly impressed. He looked dazed, in fact. In his only previous PGA in 1939, Jim was dusted off in the first round by Johnny Revolta.

Tomorrow, the corporal, who is next to the youngest of the seven golfing Turnesa brothers, ties into one of the game's greatest and most firmly established stars, Byron Nelson of Toledo. In the opposite bracket, Sammy Snead of Hot Springs, Va., a Navy man, engages Jimmy Demaret of Detroit.

Was 3 Holes Down

Nelson had a heart-thumping experience before he won out today. In mid-afternoon the Augusta Masters champion and advance favorite here, found himself three holes down to Harry Cooper of Minneapolis and only four left to play. But he rallied to shoot birdies on three of those remaining holes, to tie Cooper on the thirty-sixth green and to beat him on the third extra hole.

Snead had an almost equally harrowing experience in eliminating Ed Dudley, smooth-swinging P. G. A. president, 1 up on the thirty-sixth hole. Far from cracking under the famous Snead pressure, veteran Ed stayed in there and gave his man a stubborn argument. When they drove off on the final hole, he still was only 1 down.

Snead, desperately needing a half to win, walloped a mighty drive that sliced into the deep woods on the fly. It looked like the opening

Louis Needs $117,000 to Pay His Income Tax

By the Associated Press

New York, May 29.—Pvt. Joe Louis, he of the fabulous ring earnings and the generous heart, needs $117,000.

Even as you and I, the heavyweight boxing champion has an income tax payment due June 15. Joe's is $117,000 and he called today on Joseph T. Higgins, collector of Internal Revenue for the Second District, and asked for a deferment on the payment.

"Joe ain't got that kind of money," explained Mike Jacobs, the promotor who has handled most of Joe's fights. "Joe wants to fight in June so he can get hold of some money. But he's having some trouble getting permission from the Army. He has to fight so he can pay up."

Louis has twice recently defended his title, once against Buddy Baer for the Navy Relief Fund to which he donated his share of the purse, $47,100.94 and then against Abe Simon, for the Army Emergency Rrelief Fund, to which Louis donated his $36,146 purse.

Louis is now making a series of exhibition bouts in Army camps.

Louis Asks Court To Delay Suit

Chicago, May 29 (AP).—Private Joe Louis Barrow, United States Army, today asked circuit court to excuse him from defending a $10,500 attorney fee action for the duration.

The suit was brought against the heavyweight champion and his wife by Bindley C. Cyrus, lawyer, who represented Mrs. Barrow in a short-lived divorce proceedings of a year ago, dismissed when the couple announced a reconciliation.

The champion, now stationed in a New York camp, petitioned for postponement of further proceedings in the suit until after the war. Hearing on the petition, based on the Service Men's Act relating to such proceedings; was set for June 5.

Joe Gordon Plays Submarine Against Nats

Joe Gordon, Yanks' second baseman (in foreground) ducks Phil Rizzuto's peg to Buddy Hassett to catch Stan Spence at first after George Case (sliding) was forced out at second in a double-play in the seventh inning of the Yankees-Nats game in New York yesterday. Spence had grounded to Gordon, who threw to Rizzuto. Umpire is Calvin Hubbard. (P. S.) Yanks won, 16-1

Whirly's Weight Tops Field

Suburban 'Cap Draws 12 Entries; Calumet Star to Tote 129 Pounds

By the Associated Press

New York, May 29.—They're loading Whirlaway with 129 pounds tomorrow, putting Eddie Arcaro on his back and sending him out to try to pick up $28,000 of the $65,000 he still needs to catch Seabiscuit's all-time money-winning record.

This $28,000 paycheck is waiting in the fifty-sixth—and richest—running of the Suburban Handicap, time-honored Memorial Day feature at Belmont. It's all Whirly's—if he can whip 11 other handicap horses entered through the racing secretary's box today. But, since these 11 include Market Wise, Attention and Challedon, it figures to be quite a day's work, even for little Mr. Big Tail.

There'll be anywhere from 30,000 to 50,000 customers—depending on just how far the gas and tire rationing has affected Gus Fan's jalopy—on hand to see this happen, and no one will be surprised if there's a new one-day record for American betting posted at the big Long Island plant. Last week $1,933,493 were fed to the hungry iron men. This time, the Suburban is supported by the Roseben Handicap, which drew ten crack sprinters to the entry box, and it is likely the mark of $2,096,613 posted at the 1926 Kentucky Derby may be wiped out.

Whirlaway hasn't been to the races since he whipped a "million-dollar" field in the Dixie Handicap May 6. That little job of work boosted his bankroll for two-and-a-fraction years of racing to $361,811, leaving him right behind Sun Beau's $376,744 and within shouting distance of the Biscuit's $437,730, and Warren Wright's little whizz bang expects to catch 'em all before the summer's out.

Mrs. Parker Corning's Attention—rated by many as Equipoise's best son—and W. L. Brann's Challedon, great horse of a couple of years ago, also were in the Dixie field, but something new has been added for the Suburban. This is the Cinderella horse from Lou Tufano's barn, Market Wise. He and Whirly haven't tangled since Market Wise licked the Kentucky cannonball last fall in the Jockey Cup at Belmont.

Back of Whirlaway, Attention, Market Wise and Challedon tomorrow are eight other "guys named Joe." They are the California quintet—Hugh Nesbitt's stretch-running Staretor, airplane manufacturer W. E. Boeing's Welcome Pass and the movies stars, Louis Mayer's Painted Veil, Myron Selznick's Can't Wait, Harry Warner's Paper Boy. Others are Pictor, stablemate of Challedon, Bolingbroke and Royce Martin's Our Boots.

'Goofy' Gets 4 Hits, Same As Griffmen

3 Homers Aid Rout Over Washington; Jack Wilson Fails To Last First Inning

By Shirley Povich
Post Staff Writer

New York, May 29.—This, folks, was the Nats' day of shame. They couldn't outhit Lefty Gomez. Fancy that, if you can.

The awful fact is that Gomez himself, personally, banged out four hits against the Washington pitching this afternoon and almost outhit the whole Washington ball club. He gave up only four hits to the Nats who were otherwise shellacked, 16-1, by the Yankees. Surprise among the 7446 Yankee Stadium customers gave way to laughter as the Yankee pitcher, whose hits last season totaled only five, swatted his third and fourth safe blows of the afternoon. He drove in two of the Yankees' runs and scored three.

In the Yankees' dressing room after the game El Goofy was grinning expansively after his batting heroics. "There's only a few of us great hitters left," cracked the man whose lifetime batting average for his 12 seasons in the majors is approximately .065.

Not only Gomez but all of the Yankees poured it on the Washington pitching, if you choose to call it that. They slugged Jack Wilson, Hardin Cathey and Walter Masterson for 17 hits. Three of them were homers by Buddy Hassett, Joe DiMaggio and Joe Gordon.

Two Hits in Eight Innings

Until the ninth inning, Gomez was contesting with himself for batting and pitching honors. In fact, his pitching was even over-shadowing the greatest batting day of his lifetime. He was holding the Nats to two hits in eight innings of shutout ball.

In the ninth the Nats scored a run, honest. With one out, Bob Repass beat out an infield hit to Rizzuto for the third blow off Gomez, and after Pofahl struck out, Pinch Hitter Roberto Ortiz drew a walk. George Case got the run home with a single to center. It was the Nats' fourth and last blow off Gomez. To that point, Gomez had been personally outhitting the whole Washington team.

Jack Wilson started the game for Washington and the first guy he got out was himself. He didn't get any Yankees out. The first four men to face him—Crosetti, Hassett, Henrich and DiMaggio—pounded him for

Racing Fans Ride to Track With Baggage

By the Associated Press

Stanton, De., May 29.—Despite transportation difficulties a crowd estimated at 12,000 turned out today for the opening day program of a 30-day race meeting at Delaware Park and saw Joseph E. Widener's Fair Weather romp to an easy victory in the feature $5000-added Dover Stakes.

It was the third straight triumph for the 2-year-old filly who had won her last two previous outings at Churchill Downs. She covered the 5 furlongs in 59 3-5 seconds and finished three and one-half lengths ahead of Bullpenn and Barkeep, who finished in a dead heat for place. Hoosier Wolf was fourth.

"It is no fault of either Delaware Park nor the railroad that the train specials were not all that could be desired," declared J. Simpson Dean, president of the Delaware Steeplechase and Race Association. "The Government has need for every train in these trying days and I'm sure that the race fans will be willing to put up with the inconvenience of the present transportation facilities."

The parking lot, able to handle approximately 4000 autos, was less than one-third filled.

Al Blozis Shatters I. C. 4-A. Shot Mark

By the Associated Press

New York, May 29.—Led by Barney Ewell, Negro star, Penn State made a strong bid to add the intercollegiate A. A. A. outdoor track and field championships to its indoor crown today as it qualified 10 men for tomorrow's competition.

The Pennsylvanians, co-favorites with New York University's defending champions, were matched by Pittsburgh in number of qualifiers and exceeded by Yale but Ewell headed for his third straight triple in the outdoor meet by qualifying in the 100 and 220-yard dashes and the broad jump.

Ewell matched the meet record in the century with a 9.6 clocking; topped the broad jump qualifiers with a leap of 24 feet 6¼ inches and was timed in 21.7 in the first heat of the 220. His time in the furlong was beaten by both Charles Shaw of Cornell and Bill Carter of Pitt, who were caught one-tenth of a second faster, but they had to go all out while the Penn State ace just romped home.

The only record of the day fell to Al Blozis, Georgetown's big boy who never has been beaten in his two specialties—shot and discus. After pacing the qualifiers in the discus with a toss of 160 feet 3⅞ inches, Blozis boosted the 16-pound ball out 55 feet 4⅞ inches. The mark exceeded his meet record of 54 feet 3 inches, established last year.

Pitt's Two Big Guns

Leslie MacMitchell, who with Ewell and Blozis makes up the big three of the meet, was beaten in the half-mile but qualified. Joe Nowicki of Fordham defeated MacMitchell in the final strides in 1:55:3, the fastest time of the trials. MacMitchell also will defend his mile title tomorrow and run anchor in the mile relay, trials in which were cancelled today.

Carter and Harold Stickel were the big guns of Pittsburgh's challenge. Each qualified in three events—Carter in the two dashes and broad jump and Stickel in the dashes and 220-yard low hurdles. Except for Carter's performance in the 220-yard dash, both trailed Ewell in the events in which all three were entered.

Hall was the fastest man in the 120-yard high hurdles, in which Yale qualified four of its 11 men. The Tufts' hurdler was caught in 14.7 as compared to 14.8 of the other heat winners—Thomas Todd of Virginia and George Gilson of Holy Cross.

Al Diebolt, Colgate's favorite, turned in the slowest time in the three 440-yard trials but the up-State power runner won much as he pleased in 49.6. Hugh Short of Georgetown was clocked in 48.5 and Arthur Smith of Cornell in 49.4 in the other two races.

Giants Whip Dodgers, 3-1

By the Associated Press

Brooklyn, May 29.—Ed Head held the New York Giants hitless today until Harry Danning punched a wasted single in the eighth inning, but he couldn't keep them from sneaking a run across in the seventh and Hugh Casey couldn't keep them from getting two runs in the tenth, either, to beat the Brooklyn Dodgers 3 to 1.

The Giants made only three hits compared with seven which the National League champions collected off Lefty Tom Sunkel, but this disparity made no difference because just two hits counted for either team.

New York's winning rally in the overtime frame was started with a single by Herbert (Babe) Barna after one out. Then Danning made his second single and Billy Jurges

Bosox Smash Macks, 14 to 2; Williams Star

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, May 29.—Ted Williams hit two home runs tonight—one in the first with two on and the other in the eighth with the bases full—to drive in seven runs and pace the Boston Red Sox to an easy 14-to-2 victory over the Athletics at Shibe Park. The round-trippers were Williams' thirteenth and fourteenth of the season.

Sweet Miss Finishes Out Money Bracket In Thrilling Battle: Kirk Rides Winner

By Walter Haight

A Staff Correspondent

Charles Town, W. Va., May 29.—In a thrilling three-way photo finish, R. Y. Anders' Belfonds Boy turned in a head victory in the Summit Point Purse, featuring the Friday program here in the mountain country. With Jockey Woodrow Kirk of Silver Spring, Md., applying a slashing whip, the son of Belfonds and Laurel Time brought a $5.20 mutuel to his backers in a crowd of 6000. Locked in the duel for first money was Mrs. R. W. Chambers' Honey Play, a half length in advance of G. C. Reid's Sweet Miss, one of the longshots of the field of eight.

The race, over the Charles Town course of 120 feet more than 6 furlongs, was a real battle from start to finish. Sweet Miss, under Jockey C. Wright, saved ground at the first turn to gain a lead of a length as the field went toward the backstretch. Honey Play was close up, as were Darting Star and Belfonds Boy.

Along the backstretch, Sweet Miss and Honey Play ran head and head in front with first one and then the other having a slight advantage. At the far turn, Belfonds Boy moved up and rather than lose ground at this stage, Kirk rated Belfonds Boy to the stretch. Once in the straightaway, he brought Belfonds Boy out in the clear and went to the whip.

In the closing stages, Belfonds Boy had the most punch and came on to catch the tiring leaders going into the wire. The winner was clocked in 1.17 3-5 over a track that was lightning fast.

The camera was kept busy during most of the afternoon. In the second race, Sammy Palumbo brought Maiden Fern along in the final jump to take a purse and start a $44 daily double. Maiden Fern paid $11.80 and led G. C. Hamilton into the line by a head with Tovarich third. The double was completed by W. B. Casilear's Ida Time, a $6.80 proposition and capably handled by Jockey Willie Kelly. The filly won by a length from Royal Cross, with Durable taking the show end.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—MERRY LEIGE, $9.20, $6.20, $3.80; DOCTOR POSEY, $19.00, $9.20; HAPPY AM I, $5.40.

MERRY LEIGE closest to early pace of HAPPY AM I, responded when straightened into stretch and drew out under drive. DOCTOR POSEY was off slowly, saved ground and closed with good energy. HAPPY AM I went to front under hustling tactics early and weakened gradually. SMOKE BALL could not keep up early and closed ground under pressure through stretch.

SECOND RACE—Seven furlongs. Purse, $600; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 3:02½. Off at 3:03½. Winner, E. A. Nicodemus' gr. f (4) by Mowlee—Miss Fern. Trained by E. Brining. Value to winner, $425; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 1:27⅘.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—MAIDEN FERN, $11.80, $6.00, $3.00; G. C. HAMILTON, $7.20, $3.40; TOVARICH, $3.00.

MAIDEN FERN lacked early speed, came to outside when placed to drive and was up in concluding strides. G. C. HAMILTON was slow to begin, came to inside while improving position and closed boldly along rail. TOVARICH raced SUEGALE into defeat to take lead but could not resist the other two. SUEGALE had keen early speed while racing on outside going to first turn, forced pace of TOVARICH and then weakened.

THIRD RACE—Six and one-half furlongs. Purse, $500; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 3:33. Off at 3:35½. Winner, W. B Casilear's ch. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—IDA TIME, $6.80, $4.00, $2.80; ROYAL CROSS, $7.80, $4.00; DURABLE, $4.00.

IDA TIME first away, saved ground at first turn while in front, withstood repeated challenges of ROYAL CROSS and drew out under strong handling. ROYAL CROSS saved ground early, went to leader entering stretch and tired gradually. DURABLE improved position on inside and hung in final stages. UNITED FORCE went evenly.

Daily Double—MAIDEN FERN and IDA TIME Paid $44.00.

FOURTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $600; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won ridden out; place driving. Went to post at 4:00½. Off at 4:02½. Winner, Prettyman and Pence's ch. c. (4) by Grand Time—Feathers. Trained by V. Pence. Value to winner, $425; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 1:49⅘.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—HIGH PLUME, $40.60, $17.60, $12.30; MISS KSAR, $4.60, $3.60; CHANNING, $8.20.

HIGH PLUME forced the pace of FRANK BROOKE for half, took command when placed to pressure and was kept to drive to stave off MISS KSAR. The latter was well placed from start, came to outside to improve position and closed full of run. CHANNING was pinched off on inside at far turn, came through and weakened in final sixteenth. KISSIN KID was well placed for three-quarters and faltered.

FIFTH RACE—Charles Town course. Purse, $600; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 4:27½. Off at 4:28½. Winner, Mrs. P. G. Simms' gr. m. Two-dollar mutuels paid—SILVER BEAM, $5.00, $3.20, $2.20; STATE WITNESS, $6.40, $3.60; HIGH BUD, $2.60.

SILVER BEAM was not hurried in early stages, improved position on outside on backstretch, came to inside entering stretch and withstood long drive to be up in concluding strides. STATE WITNESS was in thick of contention from start and came with good energy at close. HIGH BUD saved ground to take command at first turn, was vigorously handled in final drive and weakened right at close. CHANCER had early speed and weakened.

SIXTH RACE—Charles Town course. Purse, $700; allowances. For 3-year-olds. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 4:52½. Off at 4:53. Winner. R. Y. Anders' b. c. Two-dollar mutuels paid—BELFONDS BOY, $5.20, $3.20, $2.80; HONEY PLAY, $4.00, $2.80; SWEET MISS, $6.40.

BELFONDS BOY was steadied in first flight, came outside of leaders entering stretch and was under punishment to be up in final strides. HONEY PLAY raced head and head with SWEET MISS while settling and forcing pace and fought it out with good energy. SWEET MISS saved ground at first turn to get to front and came willingly in final stages. DARTING STAR was strongly handled in first flight and showed good effort.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $600; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 5:17. Off at 5:17½. Winner, T. S. Hewitt's ch. m. (5) by Ksar—Love Match. Trained by P. C. Randolph. Value to winner, $425; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 1:49⅘.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—LOVE MARK, $5.80, $3.60, $3.00; NETTA WOOD, $7.00, $4.40; JEAN C., $4.60.

LOVE MARK was steadied in first flight from start, was carried wide by JEAN C. entering stretch and came on when clear to outlast NETTA WOOD. NETTA WOOD worked way to serious contention after a slow start, saved ground when leaders went out, but was no match for winner. JEAN C. set good pace and ran out entering the stretch. LADY JAFFA was hard ridden and had no excuses.

EIGHTH RACE—One and nine-sixteenths miles. Purse, $700; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 5:43½. Off at 5:43½. Winner, Mrs. N. Two-dollar mutuels paid—PIT TERRIER, $7.80, $4.20, $2.80; COURT BLENHEIM, $5.60, $4.00; JUDGE'S BID, $3.40.

PIT TERRIER, steadied for mile, responded gamely when placed to drive, took command and held sway thereafter, under vigorous handling. COURT BLENHEIM, allowed to settle into stride, went to leaders boldly, could not resist winner, but was best of others. JUDGE'S BID trailed for mile, saved ground while improving position and was held safe in final test. MYSTIC MAN was used racing SUMMER STOCK into defeat and stopped badly.

Selections at Charles Town.

Dear Al:

Racing Secretary Freddie Burton has arranged a card worthy of the weekend, plus Memorial Day program. A small but select group will match strides in the $1000 Decoration Day Handicap, a test of seven furlongs. Mrs. M. Knieriem's Red Wrack has been assigned top weight of 120 pounds and will have an entrymate in Lena Girl, a winner during the meeting. Royal Business gets in with 114 and will be dangerous so weighted. Darby Du and Navy, both winners here, will tote 117 and 115 pounds respectively while Shalleen, the longshot of the field, goes postward with 107 pounds Soldierette holds the track record for the route of 1:23 1-5 and that mark may go by the board. Henry Erickson, the track superintendent, was hard at work on the oval yesterday and promises to have it slick and fast. Another new apprentice was recorded on Charlie Gromley's list yesterday. He is Wayne W. Fitzgerald, from Lancaster, Pa. He is 16 years old and rides at 100 pounds. William Lynch holds the youth's contract. By the way, there are 13 apprentice riders and 36 regular jockeys on the grounds. Trainer's licenses have been issued to 180 men and women. If you can't come to Charles Town today listen in on the broadcast starting at 4 p. m. over WOL in Washington as well as Winchester and Frederick stations. Another program will be aired in Monday. Kenneth Knode has been bringing up the jockey overweights to the press box for years and hasn't lost a pound. Nor have I for that matter. Owner-Trainer George Mohr has been called to the Army and wants to sell Abbot's Chant and Jacotte. R. C. Chapman has sold Justice Nap to Garland Gray. P. C. Stephenson will continue to train the gelding. President-General Manager A. J. Boyle has donated a set of air raid equipment to the city of Charles Town. O. B. James has succeeded Milton Hawley as trainer for the six horses owned by T. W. Kirk of Silver Spring, Md. See you on the rail.

BILL.

First race—RED WINGS is a bad actor, but can do a lot of running. Likes 4½ furlongs and I'm going to string along. BRAINCHILD has speed and is dangerous. SINGING CONNIE could be close.

Second race—PORT MELODY fits nicely in the group. Gets in light and I'm going to string along. SURPRISE BOX might go well despite high weight. LYDE and PEETOMAR are possibilities.

Third race—NAVIGATION is better than recently shown and deserves a chance in this company. SUN SALVATOR has plenty of speed and is a threat. STADIUM will be close if taken off the reserve list.

Fourth race—JUNE PENNANT will be hard to whip in a field of this sort. Likes the route and I'm going to be there. MARKET PLACE won here on an off track and is dangerous. FALCONIERE to take care of the others.

Fifth race—GOLD SWEEP, RANDLE'S QUEEN and STRUMMING are a tight fit in this test of 7 furlongs. I prefer them in the order named. PETIT FOURS is a possibility.

Sixth race—If OTTIE hasn't been too much used at longer routes this one will take this abbreviated sprint. She gets 13 pounds from HIBLAZE, the likely favorite. TRY FLYING for the show end.

Seventh race—ROYAL BUSINESS gets in with comparatively light weight. Will be suited by the promise of a fast track and I'm going to string along with the mare. DARBY DU will be closing and is a threat. NAVY for the show end.

Eighth race—PURPORT is fit and ready. Gets an improved oval and may upset GINOBI. The latter looms as the favorite in this distance test. BRAZEN HUSSY can go this far and is going to be the one to catch.

Ninth race—J. HAL gets one more chance. Can't be as bad as those recent races. SIR TIME has been threatening and will be a keen factor. CHERRY'S CHILD has a chance at this route.

Sub race—If this event is used I'll take GAY TROUBADOUR, SCARLET FLAME and BROOMORIA.

BENNINGS AT DELAWARE

1—Little Bud, Little Wizard, Theseus.
2—Lady Dorie, El Jelis, Wallingford.
3—Jay Jay, Sobriquet, Wise Niece.
4—Livelihood, Cee Joe, Miss Brideaux.
5—Firebroom, Trade Last, She Dast.
6—Ocean Blue, Bayview, Cape Cod.
7—Uvalde, Navarin, High Arch.
8—Miarule, Avesta, Guerrilla.

Best bet—JAY JAY.

Joan T Wins Feature At Lincoln Fields

Chicago, May 29 (AP).—Joan T from the stable of W. U. Ridenour won the fourth race at Lincoln Fields today. Joan T had a two length lead over Winamac, the favorite, in the six furlong dash with Teddy Kerry third in the field of seven. The winner paid $8.60 to win and ran the heat in 1:13 3-5. Jockey Jack Richard rode the winner.

Wilson, Central Win Interhigh Games, to Meet for Crown

Roosevelt, Eastern Bow In Series

Championships Begin Wednesday; Riders Lose, 8-6, and Tide Is Beaten, 7 to 1

Interhigh Standings	W	L	Pct.
Wilson	6	1	.857
Central	5	1	.833
Western	4	3	.571
Roosevelt	3	3	.500
Tech	3	3	.500
Anacostia	3	4	.429
Eastern	2	5	.286
Coolidge	0	6	.000

All doubt of the contenders in the three-game playoff for the 1942 interhigh baseball title evaporated yesterday as Woodrow Wilson and Central nines, after a pair of exciting games, turned back Eastern and Roosevelt, respectively.

Wilson, the dark horse of the series, closed out its regular season with a 7-1 triumph at Eastern. Central survived a late Rider drive for an 8-6 edge at Roosevelt.

Thus the teams look forward to next Wednesday when they will meet for the first time for the crown worn by Western the past two years.

Because it was the most hotly contested, the Central-Roosevelt engagement easily featured the next-to-last two-game schedule of the public school season. It was close for four innings, went all Central's way in the mid-innings, and saw Roosevelt make a desperate rally at the end.

14 Errors Committed

Finally it was the hosts' own errors—12 of 'em—which beat them. Central kicked in with 6 itself, but couldn't keep pace in the misplay department with their rivals.

The Vikings set men to base in every inning, scoring at least once in all but the first, third and ninth. Roosevelt confined its scoring to two runs in the third frame, one in the sixth and a trio in the eighth.

That eighth inning nearly ruined an otherwise well-pitched game for Aaron Weisenberg, of Central. He walked Opposing Pitcher Billy Garner at the outset, ducked as Dick Koester tripled for his third straight hit, and hit George Robertson on the hip. The first two men scored on successive wild throws to second by Catcher Billy Carrier, and Robertson raced over on Tommy Tomasula's single. The latter had struck out on four previous appearances.

Again in the ninth, Weisenberg seemed in trouble when Denikos erred on Citrenbaum's grounder. But the slender curve-baller left Citrenbaum stranded by fanning Sturges and Howard and forcing Garner to pop to shortstop.

Strikes Out 11

Eleven strikeouts went to Weisenberg's credit while Garner was recording only three. The winning pitcher gave up one more walk than his rival with five.

Jack Ogle, the prize "find" of the season, tossed a 4-hit game to lead Wilson to its sixth triumph in 7 games. He was never seriously threatened by the White Tide, even when a single and two of his mates' misplays accounted for the losers' only run in the eighth.

Ogle personally paced the Tigers' hitting with a single and triple in three official times at bat. Both hits were instrumental in scoring. After notching a single run in the first frame, the Tigers collected steam for three innings and then exploded with three runs in the fifth. That was quite enough to account for Eastern's fifth loss in 7 outings.

In all the surprising Tigers, who were left completely out of preseason calculations, collected 14 hits off "Wee" Speiser as they clinched their series berth. First Baseman Don Hillock seconded Ogle in the hit column with a double and single, while Jawish, Sullivan and Hardison collected a pair of singles apiece.

Terps to Demonstrate 'T' for Public Today

Clark Shaughnessy's New Tea mWill Offer Two Squad Games; Wright, Mont Men to Watch

By Jack Munhall

Hundreds of local football fans are expected to drop by Byrd Stadium this afternoon for a spot of "T," as served up by Coach Clark Shaughnessy and his University of Maryland squad.

Two intra-squad games, the first at 2:30, will be staged for the benefit of students, Commencement Week visitors and the public at large. Their purpose will be to unveil the famed "T" formation as taught by the man who made gridiron history at Stanford and also to perhaps arouse alumni interest in a New Deal in Maryland football.

Although Shaughnessy has been with the University only a few weeks, reports of the miracles he's been working with the once impotent Terrapins have been more than optimistic. For instance, in a recent scrimmage with Navy, Maryland is reported unofficially to have more than held its own with the Middies, who generally are far ahead of the other college teams in training at this time of the year.

Admission to the two games will be gratis to the students but other guests will pay a small charge.

Shaughnessy who resigned his position as head football coach at Stanford to succeed Jack Faber as director of athletics at Maryland, has inherited what appears to be a promising collection of football material.

From last year's varsity squad there are 22 eligible players, 10 prospective seniors and 12 who are due to be juniors. Ordinarily this would be an exceptionally fine nucleus for a new coach to work with, but conditions may change it drastically. Only four of the 22 players will be under the present 21-year draft age come next fall. Two of the four are lettermen, Quarterback Tommy Mont and Tackle Jack Dittmar. The other two are Bill Taylor, center, and Kenneth Daniels, end.

Talent on Parade

Among the leading talent for the 1942 Terrapin 11 who'll be glimpsed in action today are Backs Mont, Jack Wright, Elmer Rigby, Lou Chacos, Jack Mier, Jack Brenner and Joe Hoopengardner, and Linemen Bob James, Luther Conrad, Jack Gilmore, Dittmar, Reggy Vincent, Hal Berry, Ed Chovanes and George Jarmoska.

Of these, Mont and Wright appear the leading candidates for backfield stardom under Shaughnessy's "T" system, for both have the prerequisites for success. Wright, a fullback, is the ideal type fullback for the "T." Big and fast and versatile, the chunky 200-pound junior should blossom into one of Maryland's best running back in recent years. He also is an accurate short forward passer.

Mont, junior quarterback and a clever runner and passer, is expected to answer Shaughnessy's need for an unerring ball handler—a most important item for the quarterback in the "T" formation who handles the pigskin on every play.

Today's games will be conducted as regulation affairs, with the position of the ball on the field being decided through the "Grid-eye," the invention of a local man, M. B. Lamar.

Chisox Beat Browns, 12-8, In Weird Game

By International News Service

St. Louis, Mo., May 29.—The Chicago White Sox captured a wierd game from the St. Louis Browns today, 12 to 8, to square the two-game series.

Held to seven hits, but awarded ten bases on balls and a hit batsman, the Sox put over nine runs in the last two innings to overcome an 8 to 3 lead of the Browns.

Don Kolloway, Sox second baseman, three times delivered in the pinch to drive in six of the Chicago runs. His double with the bases loaded in the third inning netted two runs. Again in the eighth he singled with the bases loaded for two more runs and in the ninth it was his single with the sacks loaded which scored the tying and winning runs.

Beggs Walks Run In, Cubs Beats Reds, 6-5

By International News Service

Chicago, May 29.—Joe Beggs walked Pinch-Hitter Dom Dallesandro with the bases full today to give the Chicago Cubs an 11-inning 6-to-5 victory over the Cincinnati Reds.

Stan Hack opened the eleventh with a triple, his fifth hit of the ball game. Beggs fanned Lenny Merullo, and then gave intentional passes to Phil Cavarretta and Bill Nicholson, filling the bases, to get at Rip Russell. Dallessandro, hitting for Russell, who had grounded into a double play with the bases full in the ninth, worked the count to 3 and 2, and then took a fourth ball to win the game.

Merullo's sixth inning homer with two men on base gave the Cubs a 5-to-4 lead, but the Reds tied it up in the ninth on Lamanno's single and Joost's triple.

Beggs, the third Cincinnati pitcher, was charged with the loss. Claude Passeau went the route for the Cubs.

Indians Routed By Tigers, 14-3, 8th Loss in 9

By the Associated Press

Detroit, May 29.—The fading Cleveland Indians dropped their eighth game in nine starts today when the Detroit Tigers hammered four hurlers for 16 hits to give Rookie Hal White his fourth pitching victory, 14 to 3. By sweeping the two-game series, the Tigers moved into a virtual tie for the American League's second place, trailing the Tribe by five percentage points.

The Detroit attack featured Rudy York's tenth homer of the year and a two-run circuit smash by Rookie Murray Franklin, installed only yesterday at shortstop. Lefty Al Smith, who yielded the first five runs on seven hits in less than five innings, was charged with his fourth defeat against two victories.

The Tribe gathered 13 hits off White and had the tying run on base with one out after Recruit Oris Hockett's second homer of the year in the seventh, but the little right-hander whose previous three victories were shutouts, got out of trouble and his mates gave him nine runs in the next two frames.

White, getting three hits to drive home two runs, shared batting honors with George (Birdie) Tebbetts, whose third hit of the game, a three-run double in the seventh, was a decisive blow.

Vaccaro, Hoya Star, Missing In Action

Corp. Albert Vaccaro, captain of the 1936 Georgetown University football team and an all-Eastern tackle in 1937, is reported missing in action in the Philippines, the War Department has notified his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Vaccaro of Allenhurst, N. J.

Vaccaro had been in the Army five months when he was sent to the Philippines in September. The last word his parents had from him was April 7 when a postcard, lacking a postmark and censored, reported him well.

Line Coach Maurice "Mush" Dubofsky of Georgetown recalled Vaccaro as an "exceptionally capable and smart football player." Dubofsky said that Vacarro is about 27 years old, stands better than 6 feet and weighs around 200 pounds.

Vaccaro's running mate at tackle in 1937, his senior year at the Hilltop, was Clem Stralka, now with the Washington Redskins.

Vaccaro is the second former local college athlete officially believed missing in action in the Philippines. The first was Mason Chronister, former University of Maryland track star, a lieutenant in the Marines, who was known to have been at Fort Corregidor just before it fell to the Japanese.

Brooke Johns' Show Draws Star Horses

Local horses will celebrate Memorial Day in familiar style today as the Manor Hunt Club Horse Show, and races at Brooke Johns' farm near Norbeck, Md., will attract a long list of entrants who have been regular performers there for many years.

On hand for the well-rounded program of hunter and jumper events will be such mounts as Mr. and Mrs. Donald C. Bradley's new acquisition, Higlo, from the Pine Brook Farm stables of Ruth O'Keefe at Warrenton; Mickey Magill's Gratchino, open jumping reserve champion at the Washington Horse Show; David Martin's Cateer, in his best form this season; William Gary's hunter-jumper, Tahra; Anita Mammele's surprising little jumper, Caddy's Trump, and a long list of others.

Otto Furr of Middleburg, Va., and Augustus Riggs, master of foxhounds at the Howard County Hunt Club, will judge both horse show events and the popular card of races, scheduled to begin at 4 p. m.

Horse show classes will begin at 10 a. m. with junior classes and will continue until time for the races.

A. L. Failures With War-Aid Games Probed

By the Associated Press

Chicago, May 29.—Attendance at American League war-aid games has been so small thus far that Will Harridge, league president, said today he would take up the matter at once with club presidents "to do something about it."

Harridge said the situation might be altered by changing the starting time, possibly holding one of the remaining four American League relief games at night.

His league has drawn only 37,991 fans who paid $40,937.57 for the first four games, none of which was scheduled for Sundays, holidays or days when night contests were billed.

"The only chance most of our owners have of finishing out of the red this year is to cash in on Sundays, holidays and night games," Harridge offered in explanation of why these days were neglected in scheduling war-aid contests. "It's also possible most of these games were booked too early in the season and ran into poor weather. But we'll try to do something to make a stronger finish."

Pointing out that the only club to draw a capacity attendance for a relief game was Brooklyn, which drew 42,882 fans and $59,859 for a twilight National League battle between the Dodgers and New York Giants, Harridge said:

"Perhaps a later starting time for games would help. At least it is worth trying. Right now we're drawing well only on Sundays, holidays and at night."

Of the four American League war-aid tilts still to be played, Harridge said two could be changed to night-time, at Chicago's Comiskey Park July 2 between the White Sox and Cleveland Indians, and at Philadelphia August 22 between the Boston Red Sox and Athletics. The other two games are at Detroit June 2 and at New York August 22, where night contests are out of the question because of lack of facilities or wartime restrictions.

Rube Melton Holds Braves, Phils Win, 2-1

By the Associated Press

Boston, May 29.—The Boston Braves dropped their third game in a row today as Rube Melton held them to six hits to give the Philadelphia Phils a 2-to-1 victory.

Melton struck out nine men while polishing off the Braves, whose only run came in the ninth and was unearned.

Philadelphia pushed across its first run in the second inning. Al Glossop doubled off Dick Errickson, advanced on Stan Benjamin's infield out and scored on Bob Bragan's long fly to center.

They got their second run off Al Javery in the eighth when Danny Murtaugh beat out a hit to Eddie Miller; stole second and scored on Nick Etten's single to right.

The Braves' unearned tally came in the last of the ninth. Sibby Sisti opened the half of the inning with a walk. Jim Tobin, batting for Javery, was safe on Bragan's error. Then Phil Masi, running for Tobin, was forced by Tommy Holmes. Sisti took third and scored after Benjamin made a good running catch of Paul Waner's drive to right, and Miller ended the game, popping out to Glossop.

Letdown Noted In D. C. Store Sales in Week

Washington department store sales in the week ended May 23 were 9 per cent larger than in the same week last year, one of the smallest gains on record here this year. The week was one in which Government price ceilings became effective on most items that people eat or wear.

Store sales here in the four weeks ended May 23 were 17 per cent larger than in the same period last year, according to the survey by the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond.

Similar letdown in store volume was noted elsewhere in the Fifth Federal Reserve District. Baltimore sales in the latest week were only 2 per cent heavier than last year, while the entire Fifth District showed a climb of but 6 per cent. The four-week volume was 11 per cent improved in Baltimore and 14 per cent heavier for the entire district.

Nationally, the Federal Reserve Board reported that department store sales fell below last year's pace for the first time in 1942 during the week ended May 23. Giving no explanation for this decline, the board estimated that the country as a whole showed a sales decline of 2 per cent under the corresponding week last year.

Only the Richmond and San Francisco areas reported increases. In the San Francisco district they were 11 per cent higher. Decreases included the following Federal Reserve districts:

Boston, 3; New York, 4; Philadelphia, 4; Cleveland, 6; Atlanta, 5; Chicago, 1; St. Louis, 7; Kansas City, 1, and Dallas, 10 per cent.

Head of Admen Clarifies True Allowances

New York, May 29 (AP).—Bona fide advertising allowances were unaffected by the maximum price order, Paul B. West, president of the Association of National Advertisers, said today.

"True advertising allowances are granted by a manufacturer to pay for advertising to increase the sale of his products and are not a constituent element of cost to the retail outlet," West said.

"If, on the other hand, extra discounts are given under the guise of 'advertising allowances,' they should be charged as discounts and not advertising. In that event, the regulation is clear that such discounts must be maintained.

"There is nothing in the regulation nor in the clarifying announcement to prohibit the giving of allowances if a manufacturer so desires, nor can the announcement possibly be construed as a blow to advertising or in contravention of the Robinson-Patman Act, which act as far as advertising goes, has the sole purpose of eliminating discrimination in the granting of allowances."

Million-Dollar Tax Note Is Best Seller

By the Associated Press

The million-dollar tax note is the Treasury's best seller in its line of securities for taxpayers wanting to set aside money to meet future tax liabilities.

In the first nine months that these securities have been sold, the million-dollar denomination has accounted for $1,301,000,000, or nearly 40 per cent of all sales, which totaled $3,340,700,000. The next best seller was the $100,000 note, accounting for $1,120,800,000.

Ralph E. Day Retires

Bridgeport, Conn., May 29.—Ralph E. Day, president of Bridgeport Brass Co. since 1930, has resigned upon advice of his physicians. He has been in ill health for some time. Herman W. Steinkraus, vice president and general manager of the company, was elected president.

Spending Wave Seen After War

By the Associated Press

New York, May 29.—Several waves of expenditures may be expected after the present war similar to those which followed the first World War, Arthur R. Upgren, chief of the national economics unit of the Department of Commerce, said in an address at a meeting of the American Marketing Association.

Outstanding among the cycles of spending after the first conflict were:

Vast expenditures in plant and equipment;

Residential housing boom;

Consumers' durable goods buying wave;

Heavy investments in producers' durable goods.

Upgren predicted a repetition of these expenditures when this war is over, but said expenditures would be chiefly for production of plants, equipment and goods to make up for deficiencies. After those had been met, he said, the country would begin to adjust itself to normal replacement needs.

Favorable factors outweight unfavorable elements in the postwar picture, he said. On the bright side were listed:

High national income.

A reduction in consumer debt.

Heavy savings accounts and war bond investments to provide a financial cushion.

On the adverse side was listed:

High taxes, the prospective lack of a liquid position for industry and the possibility of a temporary decline in national income due to reconversion of plants to peacetime activities.

Stock Turnover Least Since 1918

New York, May 29 (AP).—Total transfers of stocks on the New York Stock Exchange in May amounted to 7,228,637 shares. The smallest turnover since August, 1918; and compared with 7,589,297 shares in April, the exchange announced today. Sales in May, 1941, totaled 9,667,050 shares.

Sales of bonds aggregated $156,658,350, par value, the lowest since last November, and compared with $174,011,150 in April. In May, last year, sales totaled $169,272,000.

Gross Soars, Transit Net Dips in April

Despite a 40 per cent upsurge in gross operating revenues, April net income of the Capital Transit Co. was 7 per cent less than in the same month last year.

In the monthly statement filed yesterday with the Public Utilities Commission, Capital Transit reported net income of $137,302 in April, as compared with $147,788 in the same 1941 month.

Operating revenues for the month totaled $1,572,856, against $1,340,480 last year. Sharp increases in operating expenses and taxes more than offset this $532,376 increase in gross. Expenses leaped 39 per cent to $1,180,296 while taxes skyrocketed 117 per cent to $346,616. Depreciation provision was $23,393 heavier at $148,190.

Revenue passengers continued to tax capacity with 27,193,763 persons transported in April as compared with 18,855,365 in the same month last year.

For the four months ended April 30, Capital Transit's net income was $454,741, an increase of 22.6 per cent over the $370,856 reported in the same period last year. Revenue passengers in the period totaled 98,781,312, a spurt of 41.4 per cent over the same 1941 period.

In an informal report Capital Transit yesterday said that since gasoline rationing started on May 15 the passenger traffic has shown a 2.2 per cent increase. In the week of May 15 to May 21 revenue passengers totaled 7,818,135 while in the preceding week the total was 7,647,878 persons. On the first Sunday following gasoline rationing, passenger traffic jumped 9.9 per cent, the company noted.

C. & P. Net Also Lower

The Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. yesterday reported April net income of $113,384, as compared with $153,481 in the corresponding 1941 month. The familiar current story of heavier expenses and higher taxes more than offsetting an increase in operating revenues was repeated.

April operating revenues were $1,674,940 against $1,273,537 last year while operating expenses totaled $1,327,252 against $899,868 in 1941. April taxes were $127,993.

For the first four months the net income aggregated $465,288 against $607,671 in the same 1941 period. Gross operating revenues were 28.6 per cent higher while operating expenses and taxes were 37 per cent heavier.

As reported previously, telephones in service at the end of April reached an all-time high of 342,007. This was an increase of 4294 over the previous month. Calls totaled 43,267,000 during the month or more six million more than in the same 1941 month.

Farm Price Index At Parity Level

By the Associated Press

The general level of farm prices in mid-May averaged parity, the Agriculture Department reported yesterday. This level was 152 per cent of the pre-World War I level.

Prices of meat animals, though declining from April 15, remained above parity. Cotton and cottonseed prices, already above parity, recorded further slight gains. All other major groups of farm products remained below parity in spite of advances in prices of fruit, dairy and poultry products.

Preholiday Selling Offsets Short Covering; Stock Market Drifts in Uneven Range

New York, May 29.—Prices moved over an irregular trail in today's stock market as light pre-holiday selling offset short covering and specialized buying.

News incentives, both from war and business, were lacking and, in view of major financial markets recessing tomorrow for Memorial Day, ordinarily bullish contingents decided to shorten commitments and restrict purchases as a precaution for the lengthy weekend.

The list did fairly well at the start, then trends began to waver in the more active shares. While there were scattered gainers of 1 to 2 points at the close, minor losses for leaders were plentiful and isolated setbacks of as much as 3 were seen.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks was unchanged at 34.6. Transfers of 247,870 shares compared with 353,900 the day before.

Mild cheer was derived from the promise of General Marshall, Army chief of staff, that the European continent would be invaded but, as no time limit was set for the smash at the Axis, nothing like a quick-peace rally developed.

Among stocks Virginia-Carolina Chemical preferred jumped 2 points to a new top since 1940. Philip Morris was up 1½ and Allied Chemical 2 on limited volume.

Lesser improvement was retained by Western Union, Johns-Manville, Sears Roebuck, International Harvester, Deere, Sperry, International Nickel, Chesapeake & Ohio and Dome Mines.

Norfolk & Western dropped 3 points to 148 and U. S. Rubber preferred 1 at 74¼. Smaller recessions were posted for U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, Chrysler, General Motors, American Telephone, Santa Fe, N. Y. Central, Southern Pacific, Goodrich, Montgomery Ward, Woolworth, Anaconda, Kennecott, Consolidated Edison, Douglas Aircraft, American Smelting, Westinghouse, General Electric and Union Carbide.

Bonds were a trifle uneven and commodities generally backed away. At Chicago wheat was off ⅞ to 1¼ cents a bushel, corn down ¼ to ⅝ and hogs up 15 to 25 cents. Cotton conceded 30 to 40 cents a bale.

Advancing in the Curb were Gulf Oil, Humble Oil, International Petroleum, Electric Bond & Share, Lake Shore, Pantepec and Sherwin Williams. Aluminum of America slipped, along with Republic Aviation, Creole Petroleum and N. J. Zinc. Turnover here aggregated 42,880 shares versus 49,905 Thursday.

No Trace of Arson Found in Many War Plant Fires

New York, May 29 (AP).—Of the numerous fires in war plants in the past six months none was of incendiary origin so far as could be determined, the National Board of Underwriters said today through its committee on incendiarism and arson.

The committee's report, read at the board's annual meeting, said there had been "one or two abortive (incendiary) attempts which did no damage, by persons of unbalanced mentality."

Asserting there was small fear of incendiarism, the report said:

"The large increase in employment and the resulting comparatively high average earnings, together with the increasing value of commodities of all types, have tended to lessen fires for profit.

"So far the number of incendiary fires is believed to have been somewhat below normal and that the effect of war conditions to date has been to lessen rather than to increase cases of arson."

Another committee report estimated the value of property destroyed by fire in this country in 1941 at $306,895,000, an increase of 6 per cent over 1940 and the greatest loss since 1932.

But viewed from the economic background of a tremendously expanded industrial activity, new factories and huge production, the committee said the increased fire loss is "not a cause for undue concern."

Money Circulation Near 12-Billion Peak

The Federal Reserve Board estimates that money in circulation increased 83 million dollars to a new record high of $11,971,000,000 in the week ended May 27.

The amount of coin and currency in the hands of the public has been rising sharply all year, due, officials believe, to both increased business necessity for more cash and also to hoarding by some individuals.

New York Cotton

New York, May 29 (AP).—Cotton futures prices dipped another 30 to 40 cents a bale today in preholiday liquidation and increased hedge selling, which reflected larger spot sales in Southern markets. Quotations rose slightly from the day's lowest levels, as much as 75 cents a bale under Thursday, when trade demand picked up toward the close. Most potential buyers tended to await Washington developments regarding farm legislation.

Crop advices were about evenly balanced, reports of needed rains contrasting with others that rain had delayed work. The range:

Steel Earnings

As the wage increases may be shelved, there is good reason to expect that operating earnings of the average steel company for 1942 will at least equal the good 1941 level. The effect of smaller margins from the lower priced semifinished steels required for the war effort will be importantly offset by the operation of additional plant facilities to be completed in the latter part of the year. The increase in pig iron capacity will also ease the scrap shortage and help maintain operations at a more even rate.

With the prospects for operating earnings favorable, the extent of the prospective decline in earnings available for stockholders will depend on what tax rates are finally adopted by Congress. The available earnings under the Ways and Means Committee plan—or under a similar plan with only a moderate scaledown in the excess profits tax rate—would place present dividend rates in jeopardy and strain working capital resources in some instances.

Federal Subsidies

Labor rates are not the only worry at OPA; there is the delicate problem of determining who must take the roll-back of margins. It now appears that some form of subsidy, like in Canada, will have to be devised. But even if subsidies are approved, Congress would have to make an appropriation, unless it is decided that RFC funds can be used for this purpose.

Another concern of OPA is what to do about the lines that are certain to be dropped. It is evident that manufacturers and sellers with any choice in the matter will tend to concentrate on those products which give them the best margins under the ceilings. To the extent that such abandonment does away with unnecessary frills, so much to the good. But it is quite likely in some instances that these will be the products affording the best margins, in which event it would be the staple lines that would suffer.

3 Aluminum Plants Start Operations

Copyright by Chicago Sun

Three new Government-owned aluminum plants have started operations in May and by August 1 aluminum production will be going full speed ahead in seven plants, the War Production Board announced yesterday.

The three newly completed plants are located in Oregon, Washington and New York. The Alabama plant is expected to begin producing early in June.

Plants in Arkansas, California and another plant in Washington, constructed for the Government by the Aluminum Co. of America, will be ready within several months. All plants will be operated by the Aluminum Co.

All seven plants included in the entire first expansion program will be completed well ahead of schedule, A. H. Bunker, chief of the aluminum and magnesium branch, said. The first two were completed in six months, as compared to a normal building time of 11 months.

More Plants in December

Plants in the second expansion program, also of 640 million pounds annual capacity, will start coming in about December of this year.

The flow of aluminum metal is expected to increase every month from now on until the early part of 1943, when the entire aluminum capacity as planned by WPB will be operating at its peak.

Washing machines — Maximum prices previously established for certain new models manufactured by Barlow & Seelig Manufacturing Co., Ripon, Wis., and Meadows Corporation, Bloomington, Ill., are continued in a supplementary order by Price Administrator Henderson.

Grinding machines—WPB clarified its order so that certain types of machinery will not be confused with small household types regulated by other WPB orders. An amendment stipulates that coffee grinding machinery and food slicing and grinding machinery, production and sale of which has been restricted, means machinery of one horsepower or over.

Refrigerator Prices Fixed

Refrigerators—OPA established maximum retail prices for new household refrigerators in zone 4A, an area including California, Washington, Oregon, Arizona and Nevada. Effective June 2, the order fixes prices for models manufactured by Edison, General Electric and Westinghouse.

Screen cloth—All sellers of screen cloth have been asked by Price Administrator Henderson to refrain from increasing their prices until July 15, even though an increase in the mill prices of steel screen cloth was granted April 30.

Rail Nets Double In Four Months

By the Associated Press

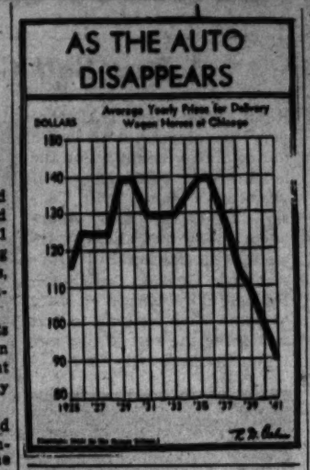
Class 1 railroads had an estimated net income, after interest and rentals, of 149 million dollars in the first four months this year, compared with $76,299,000 in the same period of 1941.

The Association of American Railroads reporting this yesterday, said estimated net income in April totaled $57,900,000, compared with $7,264,000 in April, 1941.

Atlanta, May 29 (AP).—Railroads in the Southeast report substantial gains in income for the current quarter, compared to the same period last year.

The Southeast District of the Association of American Railroads reported yesterday net operating income for the area this quarter amounted to $142,865,761, as compared with $97,067,045 for the same quarter of 1941.

Weekly car loadings rose from an average low of 118,277 in January to 130,962 for April, while during the same period last year weekly car loadings averaged between 104,749 and 116,677.



Wheat Reaches Six-Month Low

By the Associated Press

Chicago, May 29.—Wheat prices fell about a cent a bushel today to new lows since last November in a weak pre-holiday market. Other grains declined with wheat.

Liquidation prior to the two-day holiday accounted for much of the weakness, with buying power at a low ebb, but the fact that the harvest season is at hand also was a depressing factor. Crop reports were generally favorable.

Wheat was off as much as 1⅛ to 1½ cents at one time and closed ⅞ to 1¼ lower than yesterday—July, $1.19@1.19⅛; September, $1.21⅝@1.21¾. Corn finished ¼ to ⅝ down—July, 87⅛@87¼; September, 89⅝@89¾; oats, ½@⅞ off; soybeans, ⅝@1¼ lower, and rye ½@¾ down. Oats were near lows for the past several months.

Lack of buying was the result of lagging flour demand and extreme caution of professional traders in view of uncertainty regarding legislation pending in Congress affecting Government plans for disposal of surplus grain.

Some traders said market weakness is normal at this time, with the harvest getting under way, but they expect movement to terminals to be very light because of the high loan rate and scarcity of storage space. No. 2 hard wheat sold at $1.17¾ in the spot market here today, or more than 14 cents under the Government loan rate for the new crop.

Latest Earnings Statements

Chicago Great Western Railway reported net income of $496,436 for the four months ended April 30 compared with net income of $294,887 in the like 1941 months.

Middle West Corporation and subsidies, public utility companies, reported consolidated net income of $788,389 or 24 cents a common share for the three months ended March 31 against revised consolidated net income of $701,532 or 21 cents a common share in the comparative 1941 months.

Canadian Wheat In U. S. Shows Drop

Ottawa, May 29 (Canadian Press)—Stocks of Canadian wheat in the United States are just over 15 million bushels, compared with 31 million bushels a year ago, the Dominion Bureau of Statistics reported today.

Bureau figures showed the Canadian wheat balance for export or carryover at May 1 was 470,934,095 bushels, against 575,424,667 on the same date in 1941.

Steel Firm Cuts Dividend

Pittsburgh, May 29 (AP).—The Allegheny Ludlum Steel Corporation today declared a dividend of 35 cents a share on the common stock, payable June 30 to stock of record June 10. This was a reduction of 15 cents from the 50 cents paid last July and in March, 1942.

GEORGE ZABRISKIE, RECENT WINNER OF THE GUGGENHEIM POETRY FELLOWSHIP WAS A TAXI DRIVER BY PROFESSION.

"By the Light of the Silvery Moon" is Guy Lombardo's Song of Yesterday. One small tune in a big musical half hour. Tonight, at 8.

Schubert's G major Quintet is featured by the Budapest String Quartet and Cellist Benar Heifetz, this afternoon at 5.

Musical melange by Jessica Dragonette and Bill Perry, tonight at 9:45, includes "My Buddy," "Sleepy Lagoon" and "Love Has Found My Heart."

SUNDAY SPECIAL: Ben Bernie visits Fred Allen's "Star Theatre," tomorrow night at 9.

There's one person you hear from frequently who knows what they're talking about these days when the news commentators mention Australian place names.

His name is Fred Allen and you hear him every Sunday night over WJSV and the Columbia network, as if you didn't already know that.

When Fred was struggling on his way up the entertainment ladder, he accepted eagerly what was offered him as a six weeks' booking in Australia. He was a little known juggler then and the agent gave him a glowing story of how, while it was bitter winter in the United States, it was pleasant summer "down under." So Fred took the booking with all sorts of pleasant anticipations and set sail.

But what Fred soon found out was that the 6 weeks' booking meant 6 weeks of actual work and about 12 weeks of traveling between the Australian towns. So he'd play a week in Sydney. Then go by boat to Melbourne. Then wait until audiences tired of the local headliner. Then spend a week in Melbourne. Then wait again. Then take a boat trip to New Zealand. Then wait again. Then spend a week in New Zealand. Then, by boat back to Sydney. Then wait again. Then a boat trip to Adelaide. And so on.

By the time Fred got through his "six weeks' booking" he had spent about three times that amount of time in Australia and probably was more familiar with its geography than the natives.

The Post Radio Highlights

11 a. m., WINX—Memorial Day services from Arlington National Cemetery; main address will be delivered by Sumner Welles, featured vocalist will be Jan Pearce.

11 a. m., WRC—The sublime and the ridiculous will ride side-by-side down "Lincoln Highway" when Alan Ladd, whose film portrayals are rated tough to the point of sublimity by feminine fans, and Benny Rubin, dialectition, costar in a specially prepared comedy-drama.

1:30 p. m., WJSV—Dr. A. Newton Richards describes new medical aids to the wounded when he discusses the place of medicine in the war as guest speaker on "Adventures in Science."

2 p. m., WMAL—Poignant excerpts from the writings and speeches of Abraham Lincoln will be read by Raymond Massey, noted for his stage and screen characterizations of the Great Emancipator, in a special Memorial Day observance.

7:30 p. m., WRC—With a cemetery as an appropriate background, Ellery Queen will pursue business as usual despite the holiday, when he is called on to unravel "The Adventure of the Old Men."

8:30 p. m., WJSV—With restrictions rocking the American woman down to her very foundation, grandma's corset, or what the well dressed woman may soon be wearing, will take the spotlight when a New York housewife appears as guest star on "Hobby Lobby."

9 p. m., WWDC—The importance to the Nation of educating aliens for citizenship in time of war will be discussed by E. G. Harrison.

9 p. m., WOL—"America Loves a Melody," in which Felix Knight makes a radio debut. Marion Claire sings with him selections from Victor Herbert and Noel Coward.

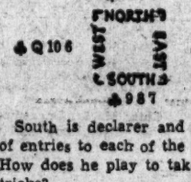
Contract Bridge

Finessing, while one of the commonest of plays, is usually a bit baffling to beginners. As the name implies, it is an attempt to develop a trick where none exists. Frequently this can be done if the adverse honors are favorably placed.

Consider this situation:



South is declarer and has plenty of entries to each of the two hands. How does he play to take two club tricks?

Technically he reduces the situation to a simple finesse, first driving out East's high honor. Then he can run through West's holding easily.

Declarer leads the club nine. West will cover with the ten, and dummy's jack is played, falling to East's king. Later South will lead the club eight, and whether or not West covers with the queen, declarer must win two club tricks. Either the eight rides through or it is covered by the queen, taken by the ace and the seven is set up in the South hand.

Salvation Army Camp To Open as Usual

The Salvation Army's Fresh Air Camp for Children of the District will be operated this year as usual, Maj. James A. Longino, National Capital Divisional Commander, announced yesterday. Camp periods will be from June 28 to July 13 and from July 13 to July 27.

Major Longino said that a small number of children from other agencies would be accepted for the Fresh Air Camps upon application to the divisional headquarters, 426 Sixth Street Northwest.

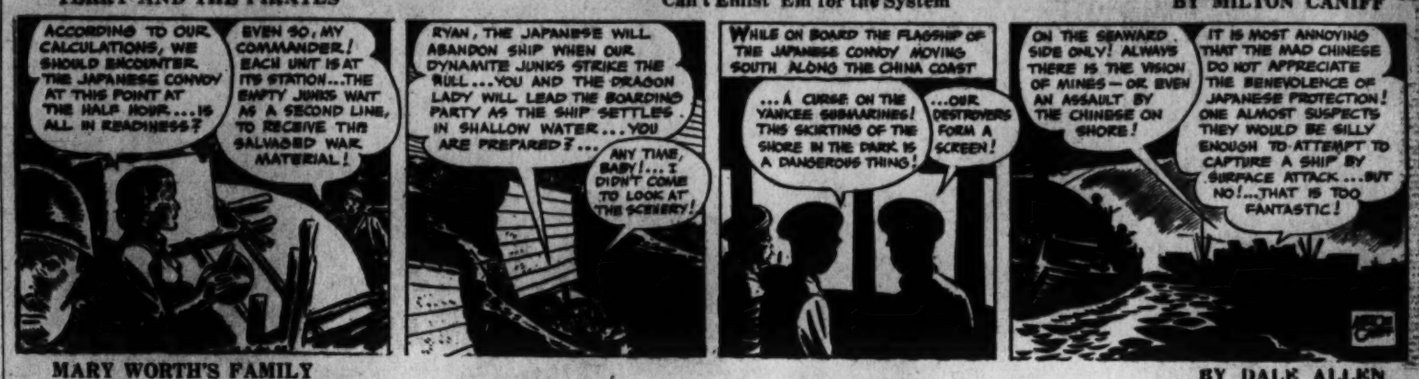
TERRY AND THE PIRATES — Can't Enlist 'Em for the System — BY MILTON CANIFF



ACCORDING TO OUR CALCULATIONS, WE SHOULD ENCOUNTER THE JAPANESE CONVOY AT THIS POINT AT THE HALF HOUR....IS ALL IN READINESS?
EVEN SO, MY COMMAANDER! EACH UNIT IS AT ITS STATION...THE EMPTY JUNKS WAIT AS A SECOND LINE, TO RECEIVE THIS SALVAGED WAR MATERIAL!
RYAN, THE JAPANESE WILL ABANDON SHIP WHEN OUR DYNAMITE JUNKS STRIKE THE HULL...YOU AND THE DRAGON LADY WILL LEAD THE BOARDING PARTY AS THE SHIP SETTLES IN SHALLOW WATER...YOU ARE PREPARED?...
ANY TIME, BABY!...I DIDN'T COME TO LOOK AT THE SCENERY!
WHILE ON BOARD THE FLAGSHIP OF THE JAPANESE CONVOY MOVING SOUTH ALONG THE CHINA COAST
...A CURSE ON THE YANKEE SUBMARINES! THIS SKIRTING OF THE SHORE IN THE DARK IS A DANGEROUS THING!
...OUR DESTROYERS FORM A SCREEN!
ON THE SEAWARD SIDE ONLY! ALWAYS THERE IS THE VISION OF MINES—OR, EVEN AN ASSAULT BY THE CHINESE ON SHORE!
IT IS MOST ANNOYING THAT THE MAD CHINESE DO NOT APPRECIATE THE BENEVOLENCE OF JAPANESE PROTECTION! ONE ALMOST SUSPECTS THEY WOULD BE SILLY ENOUGH TO ATTEMPT TO CAPTURE A SHIP BY SURFACE ATTACK...BUT NO!...THAT IS TOO FANTASTIC!

MARY WORTH'S FAMILY — BY DALE ALLEN

YEP! SURE SEEMS FUNNY LEONA, THAT A CRAZY KID'S CRUSH ON A DUDE ORCHESTRA LEADER MIGHT CHANGE THE COURSE OF HISTORY!
WELL..IF JOHN IS BEING SERIOUSLY CONSIDERED AS THE PARTY'S CANDIDATE IN '44...
HE IS! AND HE STANDS A GOOD CHANCE OF GOING TO THE BIG DESK IN WASHINGTON ..IF HE DOESN'T GET A MESS OF BAD PUBLICITY BY SOCKIN' THIS JOEY MANDOLA!
I'LL DO EVERYTHING I CAN, LUKE TO PREVENT THE EXPLOSION!
GOOD! I KNOW WE CAN COUNT ON YOU!
BLEEK, WILL YOU ASK MISS BARBARA TO COME DOWN? TELL HER I HAVE AN IMPORTANT MATTER TO DISCUSS WITH HER!
BUT....MRS. BLACKSTON! I JUST CAME TO INFORM YOU!..MISS BARBARA HAS GONE! AND TAKEN HER LUGGAGE WITH HER!

MICKEY FINN — The Boy Who Made Good! — BY LANK LEONARD

WOULD YOU PLEASE GIVE THIS NOTE TO MICKEY, MRS. FINN?
CERTAINLY!
IT'LL BE ONE O'CLOCK IN THE MORNING BEFORE MICHAEL GETS HOME FROM THE PLANT AND WE'RE NOT GOING TO SIT UP UNTIL THEN! LET ME READ IT!
NO, PHILIP! I'LL PUT IT ON THE KITCHEN TABLE WHERE HE'LL SEE IT WHEN HE COMES IN!
Mickey— He lives at 452 Franklin Avenue. Bet him, boy! Benny.

MR. AND MRS. — Near-Sighted, Like a Falcon — BY ARTHUR FOLWELL and ELLISON HOOVER

JOE, I DROPPED ONE OF MY KNITTING NEEDLES
SIT STILL. I'LL FIND IT
I CAN'T SEEM TO LOCATE IT
OH, YOU NEVER CAN FIND ANYTHING
NEVER MIND. I'VE GOT IT. YOUR EYES ARE GETTING SO YOU CAN'T SEE ANYTHING
IT ISN'T MY FAULT, IS IT, IF I CAN'T SEE?
OH—VI! COME HERE AND SEE WHAT'S GOING ON IN THE HOUSE ACROSS THE STREET!

DIXIE DUGAN — Together — BY J. P. McEVOY and H. J. STRIEBEL

AUNTIE!
THAT'S ODD!—SHE'S GONE, TOO!
OH WELL OF COURSE! GEORGE AND THE FOLKS PROBABLY STOPPED HERE AND TOOK HER SOME PLACE!
BACK AT DIXIE'S! THE STAGE IS SET BUT WHERE ARE THE PLAYERS?
I WOULDN'T WORRY IF I WERE YOU!—EVERYTHING IS PLAYING RIGHT INTO OUR SCHEME OF THINGS!—THEY'LL ARRIVE TOGETHER!
I DIDN'T KNOW AUNTIE COULD WALK THAT MUCH!
A CAR'S STOPPING IN FRONT!
IT MUST BE THEM NOW! I'VE GOT TO GET MA AND PA ASIDE AND TIP THEM OFF SO THEY WON'T SPOIL THINGS!
SURE—CAUSE MA AND PA ARE BOUND TO NOTICE THE WAY THE LIVING ROOM IS FIXED UP! WILL THE SET-UP, INCLUDING THE RECORDING OF THE OLD LOVE SONG BE ENOUGH OF A HINT TO GEORGE SHIPLEY AND ROSAMOND RANDAL THAT THEY SHOULD GET MARRIED???

DON WINSLOW OF THE NAVY — Eeny, Meeny— — BY FRANK MARTINEK

THIS ONE, SIR, AT EL MEDIO, UTAH.
MM-M. WHERE THE WORKERS AT THE NEW AIRPLANE PLANT ARE BEING SYSTEMATICALLY POISONED?
YES, SIR
LET'S SEE. IT APPEARS THAT IN SOME UNKNOWN WAY TYPHOID FEVER GERMS ARE BEING REPEATEDLY INTRODUCED INTO THE COMPANY'S WATER SUPPLY
THAT'S MY POINT, SIR. IT STILL CONTINUES, THERE'S A CHANCE, WITH THE F.B.I.'S HELP RED AND I MAY CATCH 'EM IN THE ACT!

BIG CHIEF WAHOO — BY SAUNDERS AND WOGGON

WOW! WHENEVER THEY HAVE OLYMPIC GAMES AGAIN, I'M GOING TO ENTER FOR MARATHON SWIMMING, CHIEF!
YOU WINNUM TOO, STEVE--IF THEY HAVE HUNGRY SHARKS CHASIN' YOU!
WELL, WE'VE GOT THE ANSWER TO THE INVISIBLE ENEMY SUBS! BALLS O' FIRE! WHO'D EVER SUSPECT THAT EACH OF THOSE FISHING BOATS FITS OVER A "TIN FISH"—LIKE A LID ON A POWDER BOX!
NOW TO GET THE MESSAGE HOME! IT'LL BE HARD TO EXPLAIN IN SIGN LANGUAGE WON'T IT, CHIEF?
NOPE! YOU GO FETCHUM MOOM PITCHER CAMERA---SHOOTUM WAHOO WHILE HE DRAW PLAN IN SAND, STEVE!
OW! SO THAT'S THEIR RUDDY GAME, IS IT?--WAIT UNTIL TOY FAN HEARS ABOUT THIS--THOSE NIPPIES WILL PAY A PURTY PRICE FOR THIS INFO!

KING OF THE ROYAL MOUNTED

THE SIGN ON THE WINDOW, KING! LOOK AT IT IN THE MIRROR!
ALL I SEE IS, 'ORTIN, PHOTOGRAPHER'! HEY! GREAT CAESAR!
N-I-T-R-O!
